XI of 1882.

1. The part of section 6 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1882, beginning with the words "And whereas," down to and including the words "been paid," is repealed.

"(a) such duty as the Local Government may from time to time fix in respect of such spirit has been paid."

3. In section 18 of the Bengal Excise Act, 1878 for the words "at the rate leviable under any Tariff Act for the time being in force" the words "at such rate as the Local Government may from time to time fix in respect of such spirituous liquor" shall be substituted; but nothing in this section shall affect any Act passed after this Act comes into force by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in Council. Beng. Act VII of 1878.

Amendment of section 18 of Bengal Act VII of 1878.

4. The duty now fixed by the Local Government under section 6 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1882, as leviable on spirit manufactured in all or any of the distilleries situate in the territories under its administration, or in any part of such territories, shall, in places in which the Excise Act, 1881, or the Bengal Excise Act, 1878, is in force, be deemed to be the duty fixed by the Local Government under sections 7 and 18 of those Acts, as amended by this Act, respectively, XI of 1882. XXII of 1881. Beng. Act VII of 1878.

Saving of duties already fixed under section 6 of Act XI of 1882.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE Government of Madras recently submitted a draft Bill to consolidate and amend the Abkari law of the Presidency of Madras, for sanction to its introduction in the local Legislative Council, and, on examination of its provisions, it was found that two clauses of one of its sections, imposing a duty on liquor, were, as applied to spirit, ultra vires of the local legislature, as the mode of fixing the excise duty on spirit is determined by section 6 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1882. It was also feared that the penultimate clause of the latter section, by keeping in force, under the authority of the Governor General's Legislative Council, an unexplored mass of law existing on the 10th March, 1882, might render other provisions of that Bill ultra vires.

This in itself would make it necessary that legislation should be resorted to in the Council of the Governor General in order to prevent the Madras Bill from being declared invalid; and as, moreover, section 6 of the Tariff Act must seriously hamper any local legislature contemplating legislation like that proposed by the Madras Government, it is proposed to repeal that section, leaving it to the Local Governments to deal with the mode of fixing the duties of excise on spirit, under the other enactments locally in force, subject, so far as any discretion is allowed to them by those enactments, to the general executive control of the Government of India.

The present Bill has accordingly been prepared. It first repeals section 6 of the Tariff Act except the last clause amending section 1 of Act XVI of 1863, which Act is still in force. It then amends section 7 of the Excise Act, 1881, and section 18 of the Bengal Excise Act, 1878, which at present contain references to the provisions of section 6 of the Tariff Act, by omitting these references and conferring on the Local Governments concerned power to fix the duty payable in respect of country spirit. Lastly, in order to prevent any question being raised as to the effect of the repeal of section 6 of the Tariff Act, the Bill declares that duties already fixed by the Local Government under section 6 of the Tariff Act shall be deemed to be duties fixed by the Local Government under sections 7 and 18 of the Excise Act, 1881, and the Bengal Excise Act, 1878, as amended by this Act, respectively.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 19th December, 1884, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 19 OF 1884.

A Bill to amend the law relating to the carriage of passengers by sea.

WHEREAS by section 99 of an Act of the Imperial Parliament called "the Passengers Act, 1855," it is enacted that "it shall be lawful for the Governor General of India in Council, from time to time, by any Act or Acts to be passed for that purpose, to declare that this Act or any part thereof shall apply to the carriage of passengers upon any voyage, from any ports or places within the territories of British India, to be specified in such Act or Acts, to any other places whatsoever, to be also specified in such Act or Acts;" and it is thereby also enacted that "on the passing of such Indian Act or Acts, and whilst the same shall remain in force, all such parts of this Act as shall be adopted therein shall apply to and extend to the carriage of passengers upon such voyages as in the said Indian Act or Acts shall be specified. The provisions of such Indian Act shall be enforced in all Her Majesty's possessions in like manner as the provisions of this Act may be enforced;"

And whereas certain parts of the said Act of Parliament were by Act II of 1860 (to amend the law relating to the carriage of passengers by sea) made applicable to the carriage of passengers upon certain specified voyages;

And whereas by an Act of the Imperial Parliament called "the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863," certain parts of the Passengers Act, 1855, which were so made applicable have been amended, and it is provided that the said Acts of the Imperial Parliament shall be construed together as one Act;

And whereas it is expedient that the amendments so made in the Passengers Act, 1855, should also be made in the parts of that Act so made applicable, and it is also expedient to apply those parts so amended to the carriage of passengers upon certain voyages not specified in Act II of 1860;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

VIII of 1876.

[Act II of 1860, s. 2.]

Governors or Consuls may pay expenses of passengers taken off passenger-ship.

4. If the passengers upon any such voyage as is specified in the last preceding section are taken off from the ship carrying such passengers, or are picked up at sea from any boat, raft or otherwise, it shall be lawful, if the port or place to which they shall be conveyed is in any of Her Majesty's colonial possessions, for the Governor of such colony, or for any person authorized by him for the purpose, or, if in any foreign country, for Her Majesty's Consular officer, at such port or place therein, to defray all or any part of the expenses thereby incurred.

[New.]

(2) A certificate in the form given in the Schedule hereto annexed, or as near thereto as the circumstances of the case will admit, purporting to be under the hand of any such Governor or Consular officer (as the case may be), stating the total amount of the expenses, shall, in any suit or other proceeding for the recovery of the debt, be received in evidence without proof of the handwriting or of the official character of the Governor or Consular officer, and shall be deemed sufficient evidence of the amount of the expenses, and that the same were duly incurred;

nor shall it be necessary to adduce on behalf of Her Majesty any other evidence in support of the claim, but judgment shall pass for the Crown, with costs of suit, unless the defendant specially pleads and duly proves that the certificate is false or fraudulent, or specially pleads and duly proves any facts showing that the expenses were not duly incurred: [New.]

Provided, nevertheless, that in no case shall any larger sum be recovered on account of the expenses than a sum equal to twice the total amount of passage-money received or due to and recoverable by or on account of the owner, charterer or master of the passenger-ship or any of them from or on account of the whole number of passengers who may have embarked in the ship; which total amount of passage-money shall be proved by the defendant if he will have the advantage of this limitation of the debt: but if any such passengers are forwarded or conveyed to their intended destination under the provisions of the last preceding section, they shall not be entitled to the return of their passage-money, or to any compensation for loss of passage.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

ACT II of 1860 declares certain parts (namely, sections 52, 53 and 54) of the English Passengers Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vic., cap. 119) to be applicable to the carriage of passengers upon voyages from the ports of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to the colonies of Mauritius, Jamaica, British Guiana, Trinidad, St. Lucia and Grenada, and from ports in British India to ports in the Red Sea or Persian Gulf. The colonies mentioned were the places to which emigration was then lawful. Since 1860, emigration to the colonies of Fiji, Natal, Réunion, St. Croix, Guadeloupe, Martinique, Dutch Guiana, St. Vincent, Nevis and St. Kitts has been sanctioned. With respect, however, to voyages to places not specified in Act II of 1860, that Act gives no power to any authority to recover expenses incurred in forwarding shipwrecked passengers to their destination and in maintaining them until they are so forwarded. At present, therefore, the voyages to which the Act does not apply are more numerous than those to which it does.

2. Again, the Act, as it stands at present, is strictly construed, inapplicable to the conditions under which emigration from India is usually conducted. Section 3 of the Act, following section 53 of the English Passengers Act, 1855, runs as follows:—"If any passenger * * * find himself within any colonial or foreign port or place other than that at which he may have contracted to land," &c. But as a rule, emigrants from India do not themselves contract with the owners or charterers of the vessels in which they emigrate. In all cases falling under the Indian Emigration Act VII of 1871 (or which may fall under the Indian Emigration Act XXI of 1883, when that Act is brought into force) the contract is made by a recruiter for the colony importing labour, under the supervision of the Protector of Emigrants. Emigrants despatched in this way are therefore technically excluded from the provisions of Act II of 1860. A similar difficulty appears to have arisen in England, and to have been met by an amendment of the law. Section 12 of the English Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vic., cap. 51), repeals section 53 of the English Passengers Act, 1855, and section 15 of the former Act substitutes for the words "other than that at which he may have contracted to land" the words "other than that for which the ship was originally bound, or at which he or the Emigration Commissioners, or any public officer, or other person on his behalf, may have contracted that he should land".

3. These two defects in the Act came to notice in connection with the following occurrence. In the end of April last, the steamer Laleham, carrying emigrants from Calcutta to Dutch Guiana, grounded off Ceylon, and was compelled to land her passengers at Trincomalee. The Laleham returned to Calcutta, where she was examined by the Engineer-Surveyor to the port, and reported "unseaworthy and unfit to proceed to sea without serious danger to human life". The Agents of the Laleham at first proposed to substitute another vessel, but subsequently declined to do so, offering merely to have the Laleham repaired at Calcutta, and to fulfil her charter-party by re-embarking the coolies at Trincomalee and taking them on to Surinam.

The Advocate General of Bengal, on being consulted, was of opinion that no action could be taken under Act II of 1860, and that the matter would be governed by the charter-party. Surinam, he said, being in Dutch Guiana, is not a place to which Act II of 1860 applies. He thought further that the English Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863, would be construed strictly, and according to such construction he did not think that the words of section 3 of Act II of 1860 would cover the break-down in a voyage to which that Act applied, in any case other than that in which the passenger had himself contracted.

Under these circumstances legislation seems necessary in order to bring Act II of 1860 into conformity with the present system of emigration and the English Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863.

The present Bill has accordingly been prepared. It repeals and re-enacts Act II of 1860 with the necessary amendments. Section 3 of the present Bill declares the subsequent provisions of the Bill (being parts of the English Passenger Act, 1855, as amended by the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863) to be applicable to all voyages to certain specified colonies and places, which are, in fact, the colonies and places to which under the existing law emigration is now lawful or is likely to be legalized; and in sections 5 and 6 the amendments made by the English Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863, in sections 53 and 54 of the English Passengers Act, 1855 (which formed sections 3 and 4 of Act II of 1860) are incorporated with some slight modifications so as to adapt them to this country.

RESOLUTION ON THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO CONDUCT A TRIAL OF THE MACHINES AND PROCESSES FOR THE EXTRACTION OF FIBRES.

REVENUE DEPARTMENT—MISCELLANEOUS.

Calcutta, the 30th December 1884.

RESOLUTION.

READ—

The Report of the Committee appointed by the Government of Bengal to conduct a trial of machines and processes for the extraction of Indian fibres.

BY a Resolution dated the 5th September 1884, the Lieutenant-Governor was pleased to appoint Mr. J. W. Hanlon, Superintendent of Jail Manufactures, and Mr. Liotard of the Revenue and Agricultural Department of the Government of India, to conduct such a competitive trial of machines and processes for the extraction of Indian fibres as might lead to the introduction into this country of a cheap, simple, and portable fibre-extracting machine. It was also stated in the Resolution, which was published in the Calcutta Gazette, that if the number of machines entered were sufficient to produce a satisfactory competition, the Government would be prepared to award a sum of Rs. 2,000 in prizes. The Report of the Committee, which has now been received, forms a valuable contribution to a subject of great commercial interest; and the thanks of the Government of Bengal are due to Messrs. Hanlon and Liotard for the care with which they have conducted the trials, and to the Agri-Horticultural Society of India for the assistance they have given by supplying the fibres used in the experiments. The Lieutenant-Governor accepts the finding of the Committee that the Universal Fibre-cleaning Machine invented by Mr. H. C. Smith, manufactured and improved by Messrs. Death and Ellwood of Leicester, and brought forward by the General Fibre Company of London, is the best of the nine machines entered for competition. The mechanical working of this machine appears to have been rapid and effectual, and the further question whether it can be profitably introduced into Bengal may well be left to be decided by the commercial public, who have already shown considerable interest in the trials. The value of the fibres extracted, and the uses to which they can be put, are also matters to be dealt with by experts and commercial men in the course of their ordinary business, and no further action on the part of Government appears to be called for. Should it, however, be afterwards found that the facts ascertained in the recent trials are not complete enough to enable the mercantile public to form a fair judgment of the commercial prospects of the successful machine, further trials may be conducted under the superintendence of the Agricultural Department. In the meantime, in accordance with the recommendation of the Committee, the Lieutenant-Governor has much pleasure in awarding a prize of Rs. 2,000 to the General Fibre Company of London, for Messrs. Death and Ellwood's machine. This Resolution and the Report of the Committee will be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

A. P. MACDONNELL,

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

Dated Calcutta, the 24th November 1884.

From—MESSRS. J. W. HADDON AND L. LIOTARD,
To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Revenue Department.

WE have the honour to report on the competition of machines in the extraction of fibres Nine machines were entered for competition. These will be described briefly in the order in which they were placed in the shed erected for the purpose of the trials.

Account of the machines.

I. A machine patented by Monsieur Berthet and constructed by Messrs. Talpin frere et cie of Rouen This machine was brought to Calcutta by Sir Walter deSouza and entrusted to Dr. King, Superintendent of the Royal Botanical Gardens, Howrah. It is a large machine, rather straggling in appearance, and of ingenious, though not very efficient, mechanism. The principle parts are a couple of large drums carrying gun-metal scrapers. To keep the plants up to the scrapers each drum is fitted with an adjustable curved wooden block. The plants in the first place are fed to a set of rollers which operate upon the whole length at once, that is, the stem is placed parallel with the rollers As the rollers are only about 4 feet long, most of the plants had to be cut to suitable lengths After passing through the crushing rollers an endless wire rope carries the crushed stems to the beaters First, one half is scraped at one drum, the cleaned end is then picked up by the endless rope, and the other half is carried past the other drum; finally, what is left is removed automatically from the rope before the latter passes again to the crushing rollers. This feeding arrangement did not work with any certainty. The cost of the machine if unknown.

II. A machine invented and patented by Mr. R. R. G. Hatti Borooah, a native gentleman of Upper Assam. This is a simple mechanical arrangement, consisting of two pairs of smooth wooden rollers on iron spindles set in a line in a vertical frame. A spur wheel is geared to both sets of rollers, and motion is communicated through a set of bevil wheels by a horizontal shaft carrying the usual fast and loose pulleys. The machine is faulty in design and is said to cost Rs. 300. Stems are passed through the rollers several times, and washed nearly as often, until clean fibre is obtained.

III. An apparatus by Mr. Hatti Borooah, worked by manual labour. This consists of two smooth rollers about 2 feet in length and 6 inches in diameter, placed upright and worked by iron spur wheels put in motion by a central shaft, to which motion is communicated by a wooden lever 10 feet long turned by two men. In construction this apparatus is identical with the ordinary native sugar mill, and is said to cost Rs. 50.

IV. Pownall's patent flax scraper, constructed in Wellington, New Zealand, and sent out to the care of Messrs. Heilgers & Co. of Calcutta. This is a very compact little machine driven by steam-power. It consists of a pair of horizontal grooved iron rollers, placed at the centre top of the machine. Immediately below these rollers are two drums provided alternately with scrapers and flat faced iron ribs. Below these drums are two smooth rollers of the same size as the upper grooved ones. The fibrous stems, when put to the grooved rollers, are drawn in and crushed, and then forced between the drums, where, by the action of the scrapers of one drum against the alternate flat bar or rib of the other, the woody part and refuse matter are scraped off The fibre dropping between the lower smooth rollers is held firm and is brought out underneath the machine. The cost of the machine is unknown.

V. A smaller machine of an exactly similar description by the same owner. This is workable by hand or steam-power. Price unknown.

VI. Another small compact iron machine on the same principle as Nos. 4 and 5, and by the same owner. There is, however, this difference in this machine, that the drums are made of thin plate iron, and so constructed as to ensure a certain elasticity when the scrapers come in contact with one another as the stems are passing through.

VII. A small machine belonging to the same owner as the three last-mentioned. This is workable by either manual labour or steam-power Two small grooved iron rollers crush the stems and push them forward between a wheel four feet in diameter provided with scrapers, and a zinc frame in close adjustment with the scrapers. The stems having been crushed by the rollers, the action of the scraping wheel against the zinc frame removes refuse matter from the stems, and brings the latter between two smooth rollers at the bottom, whence the fibre is taken out.

VIII. Cantwell's patent process for extracting fibre-bearing plants. The patentee describes his process thus, using for this purpose a roll mill patented by him for the expression of sugarcane juice: "My patent sugarcane mill is modified for this purpose (extraction of fibre) by the insertion of a spring or other elastic substance at the back of the crusher or bearings so as to prevent the fibre in the plant from being crushed or ground in the process of crushing. This can be done in a few minutes by removing the rigid abutment piece used when crushing sugarcane and substituting for it the spring. The crushing process is primarily intended for endogenous plants that cannot be retted, but exogenous plants are simply crushed one or more times and then retted in water for a short period, varying from two to four days according to the amount of crushing the plant may have received. The exogenous plants having hard woody centres are first crushed, then the fibre part pealed off and again passed through the mill, and then retted for from 24 to 48 hours."

IX. The universal fibre-cleaning machine, invented by Mr. H. C. Smith, manufactured and improved by Messrs. Death and Ellwood of Leicester, and brought to public notice by the General Fibre Company of London, is a very simple, compact, and well-designed machine. It consists of a cast-iron drum, perfectly balanced, on which eight gun metal beaters are bolted The drum revolves in front of a table or feed-plate fixed below the centre of the drum so as to give a scraping action when the beaters pass it. The feed-plate is adjustable to and from the beaters by set screws, so that a fine or thick fibre can be cleaned. Immediately below the feed-table is a jet pipe which throws a strong thin flat sheet of water against the whole width of the drum. These are the essential parts of the machine. and they are mounted on a cast-iron frame, which carries them as well as a trough to receive and let out water, refuse and waste, and to prevent the water being thrown about. Two men feed the machine; each taking from three to five leaves or stems at a time, places the thick ends upon the feed-table and pushes them against the revolving drum provided with beaters. These smash the woody parts of stems, disengage the pulpy matters of leaves, loosen all refuse matter, and by their action draw the crushed stems or leaves under the drum: here the sheet of water presses the stems or leaves against the beaters, a beating and scraping action continues, and the sheet of water acting as a cleanser as well as an elastic cushion or backing to the fibre while it is struck by the beaters, ensures a thorough cleaning. The stems or leaves are allowed to pass half way into the machine, and when withdrawn all extractive matter has gone and clean fibre is obtained. This is held in the hand of the operators, who then pass and withdraw the thin ends in the same way The result is clean pure fibre, which is then hung up to dry, and when dry is ready to be baled at once. The cost of a singl machine is £55, that of a double one, complete, is £100. A semi-portable engine to work two of the machines is supplied by the General Fibre Company of London for £82-10. On comparatively small plantations, instead of the steam-engine, bullock gear can be used which, for a single machine, is supplied at £30 by the Company

Programme for the tests.

2. We laid down the following programme for testing the above machines:—

* Straight running fibre. † Waste fibre.

Remarks on the results.

4. Monsieur Berthet's machine would probably have shown somewhat better results than it actually did, if a competent person had been deputed to work it. Taking the results as produced, the machine has been found to be both destructive and defective—destructive, in that it has caused an unnecessarily large amount of wastage of fibre, and defective, in that it has failed to produce the fibre in a sufficiently clean state: woody parts, pulp, and pieces of the bark adhere to the fibres produced, and these extraneous matters, besides depreciating the intrinsic value of the fibres, add to the weight shown in the fifth and sixth columns of the statement.

The fibres obtained from Mr. Borooah's machines were sufficiently clean, but the repeated and excessive crushing to which they were subjected has caused a depreciation in their value, besides giving them a towey appearance. To these defects must be added the very slow rate of outturn which, in the case of the steam-power machine, was 3 chittacks of rhea fibre in 25 minutes, and in the case of the hand-machine, half a chittack of rhea in 20 minutes, and 1¼ chittacks of madar in 56 minutes.

Of Pownall's four machines, not one produced any satisfactory results, notwithstanding the care and attention with which they were adjusted and worked by the agents under whose charge they were. The fibres obtained are conspicuous by their dirty condition, being full of bark and woody matters, and they become brown when drying.

Mr. Cantwell's process produced fibres which are certainly free from wood, bark, or pulp, but the retting has injured the fibres, in that it has rendered them brown. The improvement claimed by the patentee over the common native system is, that the natives by not crushing the stems have to allow them to steep for a period of 8 to 12 days, while he by crushing them in his sugarcane mill facilitates the action of the water while retting, and thus reduces the period of retting to two or three days. Whatever advantage this may have, it does not, judging from the results, improve the quality of the fibre, or reduce the cost of extraction, while it adds to it the labour and expense of crushing.

Messrs. Death and Ellwood's machine did not work on the days specified above, as Mr. Death, who was coming out to work it himself, was unavoidably detained on the way by quarantine regulations. As the dates specified were not a condition of the tests or of the award of prize, we arranged to have a test of this machine during the following week. The plants mentioned in the above table were supplied on the 28th October, and the fibres were worked out by this machine without a hitch of any kind. Indeed, the working parts are of so simple a character, of such sound material and correct adjustment, that they leave nothing to be desired. The jet of water plays a most important part in the extraction of fibres; for the stems, after having been bruised by the beaters against the edge of the feed-table, receive a very thorough treatment by the beaters on the broad jet of water, and, when pulled out, they are found to have been freed of all extraneous matters, leaving clean white fibre as the result. The machine is, moreover, as has been proved by the tests, capable of treating all fibre-bearing plants, whether exogenous or endogenous, with the same facility. A semi-portable engine of 2½ nominal horse-power supplied the motion to the double machine used at the trials. At a rough estimate 1·75 indicated H P. was expended in driving the double machine at 400 revolutions per minute while at work. As only one half of the machine was used for the purposes of the trials, the other half ran idle. The quantity of water required appears to be about 400 gallons per hour for one machine, but the water can be used twice or thrice over.

Taking the data obtained at the trials as a guide, the outturn of rhea fibre from one (Death and Ellwood's) machine would be about 60 lbs. for a day of 10 hours. This assumes a percentage of 3·75 of fibre from 1,600 lbs. of green stalks. The operators were imported and to some extent trained hands, having worked similar machines in Madras, where they were accustomed to manipulate Sanseviera Zeylanica. Still they did not seem quite at home with the rhea stalks, and some allowance might reasonably be made on this account. At the outside an increase of one-third would in our opinion represent an average day's work with dexterous and diligent workmen and stalks in good condition. It was noted that the stalks supplied to the machine were not uniform: tney were of lengths varying from 2½ to 5 feet; and in withdrawing the fibre of the longer stalks from the machine more waste was beaten out of them than from the smaller stems ranging up to 4 feet. The reason is simple enough: the longer stems were rather too old for the yield of fibre, and had branched owing to the crop from which the stems were cut having been grown rather openly. The addition therefore of one-third would be equal to a work per diem of 2,200 lbs. of green stalks per machine. This quantity might be expected to give at 3 per cent. an outturn, of 66 lbs. of good clean fibre. The value of this outturn, at £50 per ton, would be about 30 shillings.

It should be mentioned that owing to the late date of the trials with this machine, it was not found possible to procure suitable jute stems, as the local crops had already been cut. Some stems, however, which were over from the trials of the other machines, and had been lying for about ten days on the ground, were tried. The machine cleaned them with ease; but as the stems had been lying exposed to the sun, the fibre obtained was somewhat stained. It is necessary, for the efficient treatment of exogenous plants specially, that the stems should be operated upon as soon as possible after they are cut. The cutting also should take place before the plant reaches full maturity, and the proprietors of Death and Ellwood's machine rightly claim that the juices which contain the various gums and colouring matters in solution are then more readily removed by means of the water used. The trials certainly bear this out, for the wild bhindi, or bon-dhenras, which were fully matured and to some extent hardened plants, cut the day previous, gave the harshest fibre.

It remains to be settled whether the machine can be worked with profit. To solve this question completely and conclusively, detailed enquiries in various directions and much time would be needed, and we would have to wait for a valuation of the fibres by exports in Europe. It does not seem necessary to us to delay with this object either this report, or the recommendation we have to make, for the following reasons:—

(1) Although detailed statistical proofs are wanting, we have by rough calculation reason to believe that the machine can be worked with profit in this country, especially on jute, rhea, bon-dhenras or wild bhendi, agave, sanseviera, and pine-apple.

(2) The machine is already at work in Mexico, in Jamaica, and several other countries, including Southern India, and yields a profit.

(3) At gardens or factories, where steam is already available, a few machines could be introduced at the minimum of outlay, as the cost of the machine alone would be incurred.

(4) Where water power is available, a turbine can be used instead of the steam-engine When one machine is worked singly, the patent safety bullock gear supplied by the General Fibre Company can be used.

(5) When natives have gained experience in the feeding and working of the machine, they will probably be able to produce a larger quantity of fibre than at first.

The three last reasons form important considerations in reckoning the prospects which may be anticipated in this country. And as several firms in Calcutta have already made enquiries with a view to making use of the machine, and they seem satisfied with what they have learnt, it does not seem necessary for us to delay our report. We are satisfied that as an extractor of fibres Messrs. Death and Ellwood's machine is a distinct advance in mechanism of this class. that it extracts fibres in their natural colour and in good merchantable condition, that it operates on all plants with the same facility, it is suited to the requirements of this country, and is therefore likely to prove of great service to its fibre industry. On these grounds we recommend that the full amount available for the Government prize may be awarded to the General Fibre Company of London.

STATE AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS IN NUDDIA.

No. 13MA, dated Calcutta, the 18th December 1884.

Memo by A. SMITH, Esq., Commissioner of the Presidency Division.

COPY forwarded to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Revenue Department, in continuation of this office No. 11MA, dated the 11th instant.

2. If Government agrees, the fortnightly reports may be discontinued, the Collector being asked to report at once hereafter, should he see any cause for anxiety.

No. 2Ct., dated Camp Karimpur, the 13th December 1884.

From—W. R. LARMINIE, Esq., Collector of Nuddea,

To—The Commissioner of the Presidency Division.

IN continuation of my predecessor's No. 1805G, dated 18th November 1884, I have the honour to state as follows.

I have to apologise for not before now sending a report in the usual course, but I did not like expressing an opinion on the subject of the alleged distress until I had been over the area said to be affected.

In the Kaligunge thana you were able yourself to judge of the state of affairs, and I think you agreed with me that there was absolutely no reason to apprehend any serious distress in that part of the district. At first, as you are aware, men, women, and children were paid daily wages on the so-called relief works. Naturally, they came in crowds, being anxious to receive payment for practically doing nothing. I stopped that system at once and insisted on task work. Instead of some 800 or so being employed, there were some days ago only 90 on the lists, and these represent the amount of labour which would be forthcoming for such work (across-country road) in ordinary years.

In the Meherpur sub-division I have been unable to discover the slightest symptoms of famine or distress. There are no beggars to be seen. The winter crops are the finest I can call to mind, and no one alleges that there is any need for any further special measures. Some of those to whom money was allotted for distribution on relief works state that they cannot find any labourers to complete the works, and will refund a portion of the money received.

Labourers were a little pinched in November, but there is no pressure of any kind at present.

I am of opinion that no further reports on this subject are necessary. I have directed that no extra work shall be undertaken at present, and that no expectations are to be held out of any charitable expenditure on the part of Government or any other authority.

CALCUTTA, the 5th January 1885.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 2ND OF JANUARY 1885.

At the close of the preceding week, the weather had been nearly of normal character, and the previously strongly pronounced features of the present north-east monsoon, which had hitherto been marked by very high pressure, and abnormally low temperature, had to a great extent disappeared. The present week has witnessed the re-establishment of the previous conditions, though only to a limited extent, and thus the greater part of the Province has again shown temperatures considerably below the normal, and pressures above the average. The changes of conditions which have occurred from day to day have only been of the usual oscillatory character, but with these variations there has been the steady re-establishment of low temperatures and high pressure, so that at the close of the week pressure was above the average in all divisions, and temperature below the average in all divisions except three. These changes of weather conditions do not therefore call for any detailed description.

Pressure—Was at the close of last week almost normal, and on the Saturday (the 27th) it fell slightly; this was succeeded generally on the following two days by a decided increase of pressure, and on the following two days by a fall, and again on the last two days by a further increase of pressure, the upward movement being usually rather greater than the downward. Consequently, the mean pressure for the week has been in all districts above the normal, the excess pressure in Orissa being equal to about 0·01," while in all other districts, except East Bengal, it varied between 0·02" and 0·03," the extreme variations being at the East Bengal stations, where the amounted to more than 0·04".

The changes of temperature have also been oscillatory in character, as generally it fell for the first two days of the week, then increased on the following two days, and then fell rapidly during the last three days of the week. Temperature has been generally below the normal at the stations in the eastern and northern divisions, and either normal, or above the normal in the western districts. The extreme variations from normal mean temperature have been a defect of 3·9° at Purneah, and an excess of 4·3° at Cuttack. It is again in the night or minimum temperatures that the greatest difference from the normal has occurred; this may be seen from the following table, which gives the actual and normal mean maximum and minimum temperatures at eight selected stations. Here, taking the above two stations, Cuttack shows an excess night temperature of 6·8°, and Purneah a defect of 6·4°. In Calcutta, on the other hand, there has been a uniform excess of 2·2° in both night and day temperatures during the week

Rainfall—Has been almost entirely absent over the whole Province during this week. The only exception to this was on the 29th, when, after the sky had clouded over for a day or two, particularly in the western districts, one or two showers of practically little importance were reported. The only rainfalls registered on this day were 0·30 inch at Chyebassa in Chutia Nagpur, and 0·11 inch at Sorah in the Balasore district of Orissa.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven meteorological divisions of the Province for the week ending Friday, the 2nd January 1885:—

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 16h, and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No 86 formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemo[illegible]graph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

* A special census of the Europeans in the Darjiling Municipality was recently taken, as the census of this section of the community taken in February 1881 was not reliable, owing to the Europeans being at a minimum in that month. The number of the natives remains as before, as it was not necessary to re-census them. The ratios have consequently been calculated on the revised population under all heads in the above table, except "Age," the ratios under which have been omitted, inasmuch as the census of the Europeans above alluded to cannot be employed as a basis of calculation owing to the results of the census under this head not having been recorded under the authorized form of age classification.

GENERAL REMARKS AND EXPLANATIONS.

In the month's traffic under review, there are only three heads under which a decrease has occurred. They are in food-grain, piece-goods and salt.

In gunny-bags, jute, miscellaneous, railway material, tea, tobacco, and other items a favourable increase has to be recorded, the result being that 21,546 35 tons have been carried against 18,521·70 tons last November, or an increase of 16 33 per cent.

Increases.

Ale ... ... Tons 9·04

This increase is due to consignments for the public.

Ginger ... ... Tons 11·94

The exports of this article for nine months ending 30th September are 33,649 maunds against 18,776 maunds for the same period last year. This year's crop was a large one and good prices have been paid throughout.

Gunny-bags ... ... Tons 440·61

A demand for local packing purposes is springing up. The regular demand for exports has not yet set in.

Jute ... ... Tons 1,753·18

During the month the bazar for loose jute has been steady both in demand and price, but closes with a lower tendency. There is not much doing in baled jute.

Miscellaneous ... ... Tons 792·18

This increase is due to accumulations at Damukdea now coming forward.

Railway material ... ... Tons 566·62

Sleepers for the Engineering Department will account for this increase.

Sugar ... ... Tons 18·17

There is a little more animation in the usual local demand.

Seeds ... ... Tons 12·12

Prices remain fairly steady for linseed. In all other descriptions there is but little business doing.

Tea ... ... Tons 172·74

Prices have been ruling a trifle higher than last month's quotations, and a fair quantity of tea has been offered and sold.

Tobacco ... ... Tons 155·98

The Rangoon market has recovered somewhat from the depression it has suffered from, and consignments which have been kept back in anticipation of this change are now coming forward.

Decreases.

Food-grain ... ... Tons 541·31

Business in this staple is at a stand-still.

Piece-goods ... ... Tons 334 46

There has been no improvement in the market. If anything, prices have a downward tendency.

Salt ... ... Tons 32·16

This small decrease is apparently due to merchants holding back despatches for the reduced rate coming in force from 1st December.

CUSTOMS.

H. A. COCKERELL, ESQ., C.S.I.

IN supersession of the rules issued under the provisions of section 9 of the Sea Customs Act VIII of 1878, and published at pages 283-85, part I, of the Calcutta Gazette of the 2nd April 1879, the following revised rules, which have been approved by the Lieutenant-Governor, are published for general information as required by section 204.

1. The designation of the various officers of Customs appointed by the Local Government under the provisions of sections 6 and 7 of the Act shall ordinarily be. —

Collector of Customs.
Assistant Collector of Customs and Head Appraiser;
Superintendent of the Preventive Service and Salt Golahs;
Preventive officers, or officers of the Preventive Service;
Appraisers.

2. The Collector of Customs shall be competent to exercise all or any of the powers conferred, and to perform all or any of the duties imposed, upon an officer of Customs by this Act. Where, as in Calcutta, the Collector is also the Chief Customs Officer, he shall also be competent to exercise all or any of the powers conferred, and to perform all or any of the duties imposed, on the Chief Customs officer by this Act.

3. The Assistant Collector of Customs shall be competent, in the temporary absence of the Collector of Customs, to exercise all or any of the powers conferred on that officer. Ordinarily the Assistant Collector, and all the other officers referred to in section 1, are subordinate to the Collector of Customs, and, except as hereinafter provided, shall be competent to exercise such of the powers conferred, and to perform such of the duties imposed upon officers of Customs by this Act, as the Collector may require of them, and to perform all or any of the duties, whether mentioned in this Act or not, as are ordinarily comprised in the management of a Custom House.

4. The Preventive Officers are specially employed for the purpose of preventing smuggling. Their duties consist in guarding vessels, and in preventing the shipment or landing of cargoes before a proper pass has been produced, or until the requirements of the Act have been carried out in respect of such cargo. Their ordinary duties are those enumerated in sections 17, 53, 54, 67, 68, 69, 70, 76, 83, 129, 141, 143, 169, 170, 171, 173, 178, 181 and 194.

5. The duties of Appraisers are principally connected with the examination and classification of goods, and are ordinarily those referred to in sections 27, 29, 31, 32, 33, 34, 37, 39, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48 and 194.

6. The power to adjudge confiscation and the power to impose a penalty shall be limited in the case of all Assistant Collectors of Customs to those indicated in clause (c) of section 182.

7. If any dispute arises between any officer of customs and any master of a vessel, or owner of goods, or other persons, relating to the importation, exportation, and warehousing of any goods, or to the proper rate of duty payable in respect thereof, or to the levy of any duty or penalty thereon, or to any seizure or forfeiture thereof, the Collector of Customs shall decide such dispute subject to an appeal to the Chief Customs authority, as provided in the ACT.

8. For the purpose of determining claims to drawback under the provisions of sections 42 and 43, the date of importation of any goods shall be deemed to be the date on which the bill of entry thereof was delivered to the Customs Collector under section 86.

9. In order to obviate the loss and damage which is known to be caused to the owners of goods landed from ships under sections 83, 84, and 85, for which no claim is made within the period prescribed, and which are therefore liable to sale under section 88 of the Act, the Customs Collector may permit the master of the vessel, or his agents applying to act for him under section 5 of the Act, to take delivery of all such unclaimed goods upon paying all duties and charges which are due upon such unclaimed goods, and also entering into a bond whereby he, or his Agents so acting for him, shall undertake to meet all claims which may be preferred in respect of any goods so delivered to the master of any vessel or his agents as aforesaid.

10. When any goods are seized for an infringement of the customs law or any breach of the provisions of the Customs Act is brought to notice by an officer of customs, and any confiscation or penalty is adjudged in consequence, it shall be competent to the Collector of Customs to award to such officer a part of the sale proceeds of such confiscation or penalty imposed, not exceeding three-fifths of the whole amount of such sale proceeds or penalty, after deduction therefrom of the Government dues, if any, and any incidental charges incurred in consequence of such confiscation.

11. Whenever an amendment of the valuation stated in a bill of entry is permitted under the last clause of section 32, and excess duty, together with the penalty, is levied in consequence, the whole or a part of such penalty shall, at the discretion of the Chief Officer of Customs, be payable to the officer who detected the under-valuation of the goods.

12. No refund of duty on account of the re-landing or short shipment of goods shall be granted unless application is made within three months from the date on which information of such short shipment or re-landing was given to the Customs Collector under the provisions of section 140.

13. Preventive Officers are required to bring to the immediate notice of the Conservator of the Port, or of one of his subordinates, any infringement of the rules for the prevention and suppression of fires on ships within the Port of Calcutta, especially of those regarding the use of lights and fires that they may observe while on duty on board ships in port.

14. The following rules are prescribed in connection with the parcel-post system between Ceylon and Calcutta and between the Straits Settlements and Calcutta :—

(a.) On the arrival of any parcels from a foreign port, the Postmaster will, in ordinary cases, accept the declarations of contents which accompany the parcels as correct, and will at once deliver the parcels to the addressees. These declarations, or copies thereof, will then be forwarded to the Collector of Customs. In cases of doubt or suspicion, or when the declarations show the articles to be liable to duty under the Indian Tariff Act, 1882, or subject to any restrictions regarding importation, the Postmaster shall give notice to the Collector of Customs, and shall not take any steps to deliver such parcels until the arrival of an officer deputed to attend by the Collector.

(b) Immediately on the receipt of notice from the Postmaster, the Collector shall send to the post office an Appraiser, or other competent officer, to determine the amount of customs duty payable on the parcels.

(c.) The Customs Officer is, as a general rule, to be guided by the declaration of the senders with regard to the contents of parcels ; but should he have reason to doubt the correctness of such declaration, he may order the detention of the parcels, and the Postmaster shall on his requisition detain them, pending receipt of the Collector's orders as regards their examination.

(d.) The Appraiser shall be provided with a book containing parcel-post passes in triplicate, as per form annexed. Of these passes the Appraiser shall fill up, sign and give to the Postmaster in exchange for the amount of duty one form, and shall fill up a second, which will be retained in the book as a counterfoil. The third form shall be filled up by the Appraiser, but signed by the Postmaster, and delivered to the Appraiser at the post office entry of the goods On this latter document the duty is to be passed to account, the Cashier giving a receipt for the money, and the Import Supervisor certifying that it has been duly entered in the registers. The short copy counterfoils are to be signed each day by the Accountant as an acknowledgment that the sums realized have been duly paid in from the Appraiser's Department.

Approval of bye-laws.

13. Such bye-laws and such repeal or alteration of any bye-law, shall have the force of law upon the publication thereof in the Calcutta Gazette, with the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE works which the Port Commissioners are authorized to construct and carry out are specified in Section 39 of Act V (B.C.) of 1870, as amended by Act IV (B.C.) of 1880 and Act II (B C.) of 1883. But the Government is advised that the wording of the law as it stands does not give the Port Commissioners power to construct and maintain docks, or to raise loans for such a purpose. It is considered expedient that the docks to be constructed at Kidderpore should be constructed by the Port Commissioners, and should be placed under their management: and the present Bill has therefore been prepared to extend the powers of the Port Commissioners by authorizing them to construct and maintain docks, and to raise loans for such construction and maintenance. It is proposed that the loans so raised shall be secured on the docks themselves, on the dues levied for the use of them, and (subject to the charges already created) on the general property and income of the Port Commissioners.

KIDDERPORE DOCKS.

The HON. MR. REYNOLDS introduced the Bill to enable the Commissioners for making improvements in the Port of Calcutta to provide docks within the port, and moved that it be read in Council. He said:—When I moved for leave to introduce this Bill, I gave a brief account of the circumstances under which the Government had been induced to sanction the scheme for the construction of docks at Kidderpore. I explained the pressing want which had been felt of extended accommodation in the Port, and the discussions and enquiries which had eventually led to the conclusion that this accommodation could best be provided by the arrangement recommended by the Port Commissioners and the Chamber of Commerce. But I did not, upon that occasion, enter upon the financial question; and as the Bill before us to-day is essentially a financial measure, the Council will naturally expect that I should offer some remarks upon this aspect of the proposals, and should explain not merely how it is intended to raise the money, but what expenditure is likely to be incurred, and what receipts may be looked for from the outlay. The Secretary of State, in his despatch of the 11th March last, has distinctly laid down the principle that the ultimate charge for these works is not to fall on the General Revenues, and is not to involve any increase of Imperial or Provincial taxation. I hope to be able to show that this condition can be fully complied with; that the docks will be not merely self-supporting, but remunerative; and that, so far from involving any increase of taxation, they will enable the Port Commissioners to lighten the burdens upon trade, and will help Calcutta to compete, on more favourable terms than before, with places possessed of greater natural advantages.

The Report of the Committee of 1883 gives a careful analysis of receipts and expenditure, based upon the actual trade of the Port for the previous year. Assuming the capital debt to be incurred for the construction of the docks to be Rs. 2,30,75,000, the report shows that the charge for interest would be Rs. 10,38,000, and that the working expenses would be about Rs. 7,38,400, making a total of about 17¾ lakhs a year. On the other hand, the receipts would be about 18½ lakhs, giving a surplus of about Rs. 75,000. This estimate of receipts, however, is based upon the actual figures of the trade of 1882-83; it allows for no expansion of traffic, and no increase of tonnage; it assumes that, on the completion of the docks, perhaps four or five years hence, there will be no greater demand than existed two years ago. But the facts not merely warrant, but require, the belief that the trade and the demand will continue steadily to increase. The proposed docks will accommodate 864 ships in the year, in addition to the 200 ships now berthed at the jetties, and the Committee were of opinion that it might safely be anticipated that the whole of the dock space would be utilized, and that consequently the receipts from 289 additional ships might fairly be added to the estimate of income This would, of course, involve some further outlay for working expenses; but the outlay would not exceed 2½ lakhs, while the additional receipts might be taken at 8¾ lakhs. On the whole, it was the view of the Committee that, taking the docks and the jetties together, the income would be very nearly 34 lakhs, while the entire expenditure would be considerably below 26 lakhs, leaving a surplus of about 8 lakhs and Rs. 12,000, a surplus which would be available towards reducing the general charges of the Port. These figures are, of course, only estimates, and I need not remind the Council that in a work of this magnitude the cost is apt to exceed—and sometimes considerably to exceed—the original estimate. In the present case some of the details of the original plan have been modified in deference to the opinions expressed by the professional advisers of the Secretary of State; and these alterations, together with the charges for establishment and for interest during the construction of the docks, will probably increase the capital outlay to a total of nearly three crores of rupees. But on the other hand, some saving will be possible in the estimate of working expenses; and I believe that the Council may safely accept the conclusion of the Committee, viz. that "the present trade of the Port will give much more than a sufficient return to cover all working expenses and interest on capital expended for the construction of the works proposed, and, if the trade of the Port increases as it has hitherto done, and to such an extent as to utilize fully the accommodation which the proposed expenditure will provide, the receipts will be very much increased without adding anything to the expenditure for interest, and only a comparatively small amount to the working charges."

Coming now to the Bill before the Council, I believe I have already explained that it is merely an enabling measure. It empowers the Port Commissioners to construct docks at Kidderpore and to raise loans for that purpose, a power which they are not now authorised to exercise under the law as it stands at present. Sections 4 and 5, which relate to loans, are purposely worded in wide and general terms. It seems quite unnecessary to provide in the Bill what rate of interest should be paid on loans, and under what conditions the loans shall be raised. These are questions the answers to which may vary from time to time, according to the state of the money market and the financial condition of the country. I may mention that the intention at present is that the Port Commissioners should invite public loans on debentures bearing 4½ per cent. interest, and that those loans should be secured in the manner explained in section 5, first, on the security of the docks themselves, and then (subject to the charges already created) upon the other property of the Port Commissioners. The interest on these loans will be guaranteed by the Government, and in section 6 provision has been made, in accordance with the precedent established by the wording of the Act relating to the Bombay Port Trust Act of 1879, that in the event of the Commissioners making default in the payment of interest, the interest shall be paid by the Accountant-General, and section 7 provides for recovering the money so paid with interest at 4½ per cent. Section 9 refers to the advances which have been already made by the Secretary of State for expenditure incurred for the preliminary part of the work which has been already taken in hand, and which has been paid for from public funds as a temporary measure until a loan can be raised under the Act. These advances amount at present to 15 lakhs of rupees, and it is possible that further advances of this kind may be made. In that case the provisions of section 9 will apply to any such further advances in the same way as to the advances already made. Then with regard to section 10, which is mainly based on the existing law, the principal difference is in the third clause, which gives the Lieutenant-Governor power to reduce the rates in case he considers at any time that the Port Commissioners are charging more than what is reasonable and proper. The last two sections of the Bill deal merely with the power to make bye-laws. I do not think it necessary for me to offer any further explanations, and I therefore move that the Bill be read in Council.

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon. Mr. Reynolds also moved that it be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon. the Acting Advocate General, the Hon. Mr. Macaulay, Colonel the Hon. S. T. Trevor, the Hon. Mr. Miller, the Hon. Mr. Irving and the Mover, with instructions to report in a fortnight.

The motion was agreed to.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday 17*th January*.

PROSPECTS OF CROPS IN THE PATNA DIVISION.

No. 92—15F., dated Calcutta, the 10th January 1885.

From—A. P. MacDonnell, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Revenue Department,

To—The Commissioner of the Patna Division.

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter No. 900G., dated the 23rd December 1884, with enclosures, reporting on the condition of the people and the state and prospects of the crops in the different parts of your division, I am directed to express the Lieutenant-Governor's thanks to you for your report, and to the Collectors of Gya and Durbhunga for the completeness with which they have carried out the orders of Government on the subject.

2. I am also to convey the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor to a grant of Rs. 5,000 in aid of the Durbhunga Road Cess Funds for expenditure on relief works.

3. The Board of Revenue have been authorized to suspend the collection of rent in those Government estates in the district of Gya in which distress is anticipated by reason of the failure of crops.

No. 95—18F., dated Calcutta, the 10th January 1885.

From—A. P. MacDonnell, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Revenue Department,

To—The Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Land Revenue Department.

I am directed to forward, for the information of the Board, copy of a report* from the Commissioner of Patna, regarding the state and prospects of the crops in the Nowada, Durbhunga and Behar sub-divisions, and to say that the Lieutenant-Governor authorizes the Board to suspend, for such time as may be deemed necessary, the collection of rent in those Government estates in the district of Gya in which distress may be found to exist in consequence of the failure of crops.

* No. 900G., dated the 23rd December 1884, with enclosures.

No. 900G., dated Bankipore, the 23rd December 1884.

From—F. M. Halliday, Esq., Commissioner of the Patna Division,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Revenue Department.

With reference to the concluding portion of Government Resolution dated the 18th ultimo, published in the Supplement to the Calcutta Gazette of the 19th idem, on the reports of the Commissioners on the state and prospects of the crops in the several divisions, I have the honour to submit the further report therein called for. The only parts in this division in regard to which any anxiety is felt are the sub-divisions of Nowada in Gya, the Sudder sub-division of Durbhunga, and the Behar sub-division in Patna.

2. Mr. Macpherson, the Sub-divisional Officer of Nowada, has been all over the bad parts of his sub-division, and the Collector, Mr. Boxwell, has been in the worst parts himself. The result of their observation and enquiries is given below.

3. Mr. Boxwell says that all that has been already reported is completely confirmed, both by his own observations and abundant testimony.

4. Along the banks of the Falgoo, there is fairly good rice. From within a mile and a half of the Falgoo, along the line marched by Mr. Boxwell, there is hardly any rice up to Govindpore.

5. Between the two ranges of hills which enclose what is call Utri, there is some fair rice. Except for this, the rice crop in that part of the district is a total failure.

6. There are degrees of badness. The Government estate of Sansihari is a sample of the very worst. There the rice-fields are as bare as a road. There is nothing but brown tufts of coarse grass nibbled as short as possible by the cattle. Near Pukri Barawan the case is the same. Mr. Macpherson reports at the north of Sansihari, as far as the Behar border, things are as bad as this.

7. Next to these come places where the rice grew but could not seed, where there is a short straw for fodder. Of such there is not very much. Apparently where the rice grew at all it had some advantage of moisture which let it seed. By this it is meant that, considering the vast extent of rice land which has borne not even straw, the quantity which has borne only straw seems small.

8. Gobindpore is safe. There is a much better supply of water from the hills than in any other place. Again, south to Rajowli, the rice is as good as about Gobindpore.

9. The places where rice has failed are also naturally worst off, both for fodder and water. A Brahmin whom the Collector met on the road near Warisallygunge, in answer to his question, "who are now the worst of," said at once "the cattle."

10. Mr. Boxwell states that, though what Mr. Macpherson says is true that so far the cattle are not dying, and do not even look unusually thin, still in the worst parts they must have a very bad time before them. He says that he has seen the village cattle grazing where even a "kurpi" could only scrape up earth.

11. In this same region there is also a complaint that the wells easily run dry.

12. Warrisallygunge, though not itself the worst spot, may be taken as the centre of the worst region, the region of worst rice, worst fodder, and least water, furthest removed from any hills where jungle can help.

13. The bright side of the matter is that so far rubbee prospects are very good. The District Superintendent of Police asserts that less than the usual quantity of rubbee has been grown this year. Mr. Boxwell differs from him on this point. He says all other testimony goes to prove that much more rubbee has been sown this year. The patwarees in Government estates prove it so far by their papers. The Sub-Deputy Collector of Nowada, zemindari servants, and the villagers themselves, all report that the area sown this year in rubbee is much larger than usual.

14. Moreover, so far the condition of the rubbee is better than it was this time last year. The state of the crops last year at this time was very unfavourable, and there was every fear of a very serious scarcity. The early rubbee last year was very bad, but the late rubbee saved people. This year the early rubbee varies from middling to very good, and the late rubbee prospects are better than last year.

15. Beggars are numerous, but not more than last year. Most of them are the ordinary professional beggars.

16. Everything depends on the rubbee, and the rubbee depends on rain within three weeks. The whole country seems to be outdraining every drop of water that can be had on to their poppy and other rubbee crops.

17. Prices are low and importation abundant. The difficulty is with people too poor to buy, who at this season live on their labour in the rice harvest.

18. Mr. Boxwell proposes to suspend collection of rent. On this subject he writes as follows:—

"I now come to our proposed action, which, indeed, has already begun It is chiefly to urge one point on you that I write before I am quite ready.

"I think far the easiest and best way of giving help is to suspend collection of rent. The arguments in favour of this measure seem to me axiomatic in their strength. The Board have already permitted me to suspend collections in Sansihari till after the rubbee harvest. I have taken the responsibility of ordering that in all our Nowada estates no pressure shall be put on. But I would ask you to do this, to request Government to put this notice in the next Gazette:—

"'In the Government estates in Gya, east of the Falgoo, no rent shall be collected till after the rubbee harvest.'

"The ryots everywhere are waiting for the next opium advances, and the landlords are waiting to get their share. Now, if Government lets this kist hang over and says so loudly, it will both encourage ryots and set the best possible example to every zemindar who can afford to follow it.

"We have very little bhowli, but in our estates of Belarna I saw the rice on the Khalihan. There are 100 maunds of 28 bighas, somewhat less than 4 maunds a bigha—fair for this year, very bad for any other.

"In such a season we ought not to take one-half to sell. We should leave it and debit the ryots with the price against better time.

"I hope you will pardon my dwelling so long on this. When a crop fails largely there is no rent to pay. If any is paid, it comes out of savings of wages. Large tenure-holders can average of course and pay for bad out of the proceeds of good years, but small, poor cultivators cannot. They have no savings."

19. I support the Collector's recommendation that no rent should be collected from the ryots in the Government estates in Nowada until the rubbee harvest is gathered.

In regard to other measures adopted for the relief of the people, the Collector reports as follows:—

"We are giving work on the Nowada road, paid for out of the road cess fund. This is not on a large scale. The work is bad and very uneconomical. The District Engineer does not think the work done worth anything.

"We have selected a tank in Pakri Barawan Bazar as a Government relief work. The tank is large and clean and now perfectly dry. Even in wells dug in the tank, water is eight feet below the surface. The maliks are poor and unwilling to spend a penny on it. They say it will do them no good."

20. A relief register under the Famine Code has been opened at Nowada.

21. Mr. Boxwell has ordered kutcha wells to be dug in the Government estates wherever they are wanted for the irrigation of the poppy and rubbee, irrespective of all budgets. A good many have been dug.

The Collector is also arranging for metal-breaking and kunker-picking near the road.

22. While driving from Nowada to Gya and back, the Collector states that west of Tongi, about half way, the improvement in the crops was well marked. He saw several khalihans well filled, and the rice field showed either rice or stubble with a little green grass in places. There were still very bad patches, but nothing nearly so bad as in the east.

23. The Collector says that his chief reason for thinking his action sufficient for the present is the fact that in all the Government estates the one request of the ryots is to spare them the present collection of rent and dig them wells. Every well dug not only waters so much land, but employs from two to seven men. He therefore encourages everyone to dig wells, and offers loans of money freely to whoever will take it.

The ryots of Sansihari are satisfied. They say they will get on to the rubbee harvest with very little more help.

24. The area of bad failure is estimated at about 250 square miles, or a triangle with a 30-mile base passing through Nowadah and an altitude of 16 miles up to the Behar boundary. A map showing the affected tracts in the Nowada sub-division is enclosed.

25. The Collector of Durbhunga submits the following report on the state of crops and condition of the people in pergunnahs Chackmani, Tarson, Padaree, Benua, Hirnee, and Ahish, which may be said to comprise the only tract of country in this district at all seriously affected by the deficient rainfall of the past season. In the accompanying sketch map the Collector shows the relative position of these six pergunnahs; this sketch, for purposes of comparison with other parts of the district, should be laid on the copy of the district map of Durbhunga printed after the survey, which continued from 1846 to 1849. This sketch only shows the principal villages, the district roads, and the rivers.

26. During the last two weeks the Collector travelled in every direction in all the pergunnahs abovementioned, save Ahish, which he visited in October last, and no signs of distress were discernible there; but Mr. Price is informed now that there will be scarcity there in the future, and he will therefore thoroughly inspect it within the next few days.

27. As regards Benua and Padaree, there is not the slightest reason to apprehend future distress. The bhadoi was a 12-anna crop, the rice an 8-anna crop, and the prospects of the rubbee are excellent. The outlook is now much better than it was at the corresponding time last year, when neither so good a bhadoi nor rice crop had been reaped, and certainly not near so good a rubbee crop was growing in the field as we may fairly expect to reap this season if rain falls in the end of this month or beginning of next: even without any rain there will be an 8-anna rubbee crop, a larger area of which has been planted this year than in any previous year. It is hoped that there will be rain soon, but under any circumstances the Collector takes the entire responsibility upon himself of affirming that there will be no distress at all in Padaree or Benua. In the annexed statement, marked A, is given a list of the number of people in each village of these and other pergunnahs who will be in need of employment; but such is the normal condition every year, and the zemindars who cultivate large tracts of land within the pergunnahs of Padaree and Benua will themselves be able to give ample labour to the people, who, besides cultivating a little land of their own, work regularly for hire as day-labourers.

28. Regarding pergunnah Chakmani, the statement referred to in the last paragraph will show that the names of only two villages are given where people will be in want of labour. Mr. Price has carefully inspected Chakmani; a large area has been planted out in rubbee, and if rain falls soon there will be no cause for anxiety. If rain keeps off, the outlook will be serious: the late bhadoi and rice crops were poor, and there will not be sufficient employment in harvesting the scanty outturn of rubbee. It must not be understood that there is no suffering even now in Chakmani. Ordinarily beggars of either sex, who are always in existence as the waifs and strays of the lower orders, are more frequently observed, and more unfortunate under the existing pressure of high prices than they generally are, where the economic equilibrium is not so greatly disturbed; but if these pitiable objects of humanity betoken distress, then it will have to be conceded that distress prevails everywhere throughout the district. As the result of the Collector's own personal observations, he is satisfied that the present state of Chakmani need occasion no anxiety.

The same may be said of pergunnah Hirnee.

29. The next pergunnah for consideration is Tarson, and here the condition of affairs has already assumed a grave appearance. The last bhadoi was a poor crop; the rice crop was nil owing to deficiency of moisture, and the country is totally unsuited to the cultivation of rubbee. Almost throughout the pergunnah there are no signs of any future harvest to be reaped, and there are yet eight months before the next bhadoi can be realized. The people are in a bad way. But most of the labouring classes have left the pergunnahs for Alapur and other places in the district, in search of employment, taking their families with them. It is said that a great many have returned unsuccessful. If this is the case the gravity of the position is still further heightened. At the same time the Collector admits that there is no distress apparent yet and that we are a long way still from entertaining the necessity of gratuitous relief; but Mr. Price considers that the time has come to open out work on village roads for those who will come to seek employment in this way. It is more economical to begin now than later, when the labouring classes become too debilitated and are in a stage of too great prostration, especially the women and children, to be able to give satisfactory outturn of work. Unfortunately the sums of money at the Collector's disposal from District Road Funds are limited: there is only a small margin left from village road allotment, provision having already been made in the last budget estimate for the expenditure in different ways of the remaining income of the District Road Committee. The Collector states: "I will not be able in my own responsibility to alienate any of this income which may still be unexpended, for the Committee are a very independent body and are impatient of any interference with their assignments of road cess money. They openly expressed their opinion some months back that it was not their province to find employment for people who are in need of work; that it was for Government to find means to support those who were in distress. Under these circumstances I should feel much obliged for any instruction or advice you may be pleased to give me."

Under the circumstances stated I strongly recommend that Government sanction a special grant of Rs. 5,000, to be placed at the disposal of the Collector for expenditure on relief works.

30. The Government have asked why Tarson should differ in its condition in respect of outturn of crops from the adjacent parts of the Monghyr district which are said to be comparatively well off. The answer is quite plain. Tarson is in the main a rice-producing country only. The rice crop for the last two seasons has been a failure, and the land is not adapted for the production of any other kind of crop. The further south one travels the better the difference between the two districts is realized. In the adjacent parts of Monghyr the rubbee crops are in excellent condition, and the Collector was given to understand that a very fair bhadoi had been reaped. Tarson had very little bhadoi and has no rubbee, besides being utterly deficient in the outturn of rice crop this season. The southern boundary of the pargunnah Tarson is the river Kase. Even before its banks are reached from the north the aspect begins to change, and after the river is crossed the face of the country wears an appearance quite dissimilar to what it does in Tarson. In this latter pergunnah, besides the consideration that the land is suited for the production of rice only, the inhabitants put off the preparation of their fields in hopes of rain falling to bring the rice to maturity. When that hope was given up, it was too late to prepare the ground for rubbee, as it had hardened beyond recall. To the south of the Kase rubbee is one of the staple crops, and though land is high the early preparation secured retention of the necessary degree of moisture. To the south of the Kase "soothnies," "aluas," and other root-crops have afforded chief subsistence to the people, which has been entirely denied to those living in Tarson.

31. The Collector is not sufficiently acquainted with the condition of Ahish pergunnah to hazard any remarks regarding the wants of the people living in that pergunnah, but he intends to visit the pergunnah almost immediately. There is no reason to believe that its condition is worse than that of Himee, which lies immediately to the south-west of it.

There need be no apprehension of any scarcity of fodder for cattle: there is abundance of it in the country, and if rain falls the supply will be still further augmented.

32. In pergunnah Tarson and parts of Chakmani and Padaree the want of water is very much felt, not so much for drinking or culinary purposes as for purposes of ablution and for the wants of cattle. The tanks are nearly all dry, most of the wells are running dry, the old beds of the rivers which have always run with water at this time of the year contain only stagnant pools of dirty water here and there. Doubtless the digging of tanks would be of considerable benefit to the people, if not so much in this as in future years, and suitable employment could be found for day-labourers, for there is at least one tank in each village—often more. Mr. Price has noticed that fresh water can always be found a very few feet from the surface, more particularly in the old beds of rivers. But no part of the income of the District Road Committee can be legally expended in the excavation of tanks and wells; and if the Collector is to operate in this direction at all, he should be supplied with the necessary funds. He has tried to induce petty maliks and others to take loans for the purpose of digging and enlarging tanks, but has not been successful hitherto. People seem to think that the Government ought to do every thing for them—even that which they ought to do for themselves.

33. The Collector sums up by remarking that there is no substantial distress at present apparent anywhere, and certainly no occasion to dispense gratuitous relief In only one pergunnah of the six affected (Tarson) the labouring classes and the poorer ryots only are very hard pressed owing to loss of rice crops in two successive seasons and to the high prices prevailing. Mr. Price proposes to give them work in renovating certain village roads. This measure will operate as a test to discover whether the people are in want of work to support themselves. If they do not come it will be accounted as a sign that they are better off elsewhere, and the work will be stopped. A full day's work will be exacted for a full day's wages, payment being made in cash. The Collector has no reason to believe that grain will not be brought in sufficient quantities for sale. Petty dealers in grain abound throughout the country, and the railway will pour in the necessary supplies. The prices of the commoner sorts of grain are not high. Rice of course is very dear, and will be dearer till the next crop is reaped; but very little rice is eaten here. Mr. Price adds as a passing observation that rain, independently of other reasons, is very much wanted to loosen or soften the ground to admit of digging and excavation being carried on. The surface is extremely hard even in the low lands. Even taking an optimist view of things the Collector thinks, however, it will be necessary for him to watch closely this part of the country for the next six months. It should be remembered that the bhadoi will not be reaped till August, and in pergunnah Tarsoon there is no hope of any crop till that time.

34. The Collector wishes personally to verify the accounts that he had received, most of which were exaggerated, and others did dot adequately illustrate the position. Besides the Collector says the later a report of this kind is submitted before a crisis actually supervenes, the more full and accurate is the information it imparts. Mr. Price hopes, however, that matters will never become really critical in Durbhunga.

35. The Collector of Patna has not yet submitted his report; but from the cold weather tour diary of the Sub-divisional Officer of Behar, I am glad to find that the general condition of the sub-division is satisfactory.

METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL SUMMARY FOR THE MONTH OF DECEMBER 1884.

THE Meteorology of Bengal in December is usually of simple character, and is similar to that described as representing the normal meteorology of November. The conditions are of course those of the full development of the north-east monsoon, and usually the month is characterised by steadily reducing temperatures and increasing pressure, while the sky is practically free from cloud, and steady northerly winds blow over the whole Province. The reduction of temperature is perhaps the most prominent feature of the month, and is generally very clearly marked. It is of course due to the diminishing altitude of the sun, and to the decrease in the length of the days, combined with the fact that, as the air is generally very dry, radiation at night goes on very rapidly, and thus more heat is lost at night than is gained from the sun's rays during the shortened days. There is thus a steady fall of temperature during the month, and December is one of the coldest months of the year, though in certain cases January is still colder owing to the continued action of the above causes. From the fact that the nocturnal radiation of heat is very rapid, there is usually a very considerable difference between the day and night temperatures, and the daily range of temperature is very considerable. It will of course be understood that any cause which promotes the rapid radiation of heat from the earth during the night will also diminish the nocturnal and consequently the mean temperatures, and will thus increase the daily range of temperature. The radiation of heat from the earth's surface is facilitated by the absence of cloud and by low humidity of the air. Consequently it will generally be found that these three conditions accompany one another, and that if the sky is free from cloud or the air abnormally dry, the temperature will also be abnormally low, particularly at night. These are, then, the usual characteristics of December; but, as in the preceding month, the ordinary meteorological features are liable to be disturbed by the occurrence of two classes of abnormal conditions. The first class of abnormal actions is due to the occurrence of cyclonic disturbances, generally, however, in the extreme south of the Bay. These are of rather rare occurrence, and they are apparently produced by the south-west moist winds, which still continue to blow on the north of the equator and to some extent in the extreme south-eastern parts of the Bay of Bengal. If such a cyclonic disturbance is generated, and if it developes to any considerable extent, it may affect the weather in Bengal, giving rise to the formation of cloud and to rain showers. Smaller disturbances of this kind, however, have practically no effect on the weather in Bengal, and with their westerly movement towards the South Madras or Ceylon coast, only intensify the north-east monsoon conditions in Bengal.

The second class of abnormal conditions is brought about by the occurrence of what may be called land storms. The formation of these is not well understood, but they generally commence on the north-west frontier of India, and drift in an easterly direction, usually reaching the North-West Provinces and perhaps Behar or the Central Provinces, and more rarely extending to Bengal Proper. These bring low barometer, clouded skies and usually light rain, and in many years a storm of this kind makes its appearance within the last ten days of December, giving rise to what are familiarily termed the Christmas rains.

The normal average rainfall of the month is very small, and in no district does it amount to half an inch. The two districts which usually receive the largest amounts are Orissa and East Bengal, which show a mean December rainfall of between four and five tenths of an inch. South-West and North Bengal, and Chota Nagpur, show an average of about two-tenths of an inch, and the whole of Behar does not receive as much as a tenth of an inch of rain in normal years.

Meteorological summary of the month.—The weather in Bengal in December has been characterised by an almost entire absence of disturbances of the two classes noted above, and it has thus been of typical north-east monsoon character. In fact the north-east monsoon conditions have been present in a rather strongly pronounced form, particularly in the first half of the month, when skies were unusually clear, temperature (more especially the night temperature) much lower than the normal, humidity also low, and the northerly winds unusually steady. These conditions have of course also been accompanied by an almost entire absence of rainfall over the greater part of the Province. The only disturbance of the first class which occurred in the Bay of Bengal was a small cyclonic storm which formed in the south of the Bay about the 15th or 16th of the month; it developed slightly and advanced in a westerly direction till the 18th instant, when it passed across the south of the Peninsula and the north of Ceylon, giving excessively heavy rain to the districts through which it passed. The storm was, however, far too small to have any very marked influence on the weather in Bengal, and no alteration in the weather conditions was produced by it, unless perhaps a slight increase of cloud about that period may be attributed to this cause, and which gave two or three light showers in North Bengal. Of the second class the only disturbance noted was a very feeble one, which was developed over Northern India on the 23rd and 24th, giving light rain to the Punjab, North-West Provinces, and Central Provinces, and which also affected the weather and gave rain in Orissa and to a slight extent in Chutia Nagpur and South-West Bengal. With the exception of these two very slight disturbances, the weather conditions during the past month do not call for detailed comment.

Pressure was very high at the commencement of the month, and it continued considerably above the normal up to about the 15th, when it fell off and continued nearly normal till the last week, when it again rose considerably above the normal. The mean pressure for the month has thus been above the normal in all districts. Behar, as in the previous month, was the seat of the greatest excess, where it equalled 0·07 inch, and in other districts it varies from about 0·04 inch to 0·05 inch.

Temperature was in all cases extremely low in the first half of the month, but after this for about ten days it became more nearly normal, and in many cases above it; but during the last week again temperature began to fall below the normal. In all districts, however, the mean temperature for the month has been below the normal, the largest defect of 1·7° being in East Bengal, and the smallest of 0·2° in Chutia Nagpur. This defect has been principally, however, in the night temperatures, and in the earlier part of the month at such stations as Cuttack and Purneah, there was a deficiency of 7° below the normal minimum temperature. This low temperature has been accompanied by a humidity also much below the normal at all stations, and also with a cloud proportion considerably lower than in former years.

As noticed above, rainfall has been almost entirely absent except over very limited areas, and it has been confined practically to two brief periods. Thus a few showers fell on the 14th at four stations in North Bengal; on the 20th an isolated shower was reported from Buxa, and on the 23rd and 24th fairly general but light rain was reported from Orissa, especially in the Poorec and Cuttack divisions, while a few showers were reported from Chutia Nagpur and South-West Bengal. These with the exception of one or two isolated showers of practically no importance, comprise the whole rainfall of the month. Rainfall has thus been entirely absent from East Bengal and from North and South Behar; it has also been practically absent from South-West Bengal and North Bengal. In Chutia Nagpur the average fall has been less than a tenth of an inch, while the only district which received general rain (Orissa) gives an average of less than a quarter of an inch. It need therefore scarcely be said that the rainfall in all districts has been below the normal.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven Meteorological Divisions of the Province for the month of December 1884 :—

CALCUTTA, the 12th January 1885.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 9TH OF JANUARY 1885.

At the close of the preceding week, the meteorological conditions in Bengal, which had been nearly normal for some period, were reverting to the character which they have held for the greater part of the present north-east monsoon. Temperature was below the normal in the eastern and northern divisions, and nearly normal or above normal in the western districts, while pressure was above the average in all divisions. The changes which have occurred in Bengal during the past week have, on the whole, rendered these characters more pronounced, and the mean pressure for the week has everywhere been largely above the normal, while temperature has been decidedly below the normal in all divisions except Orissa and Chutia Nagpur.

In Bengal itself the meteorological changes for the week have been small, and, as usual, of an oscillating character, but for the last three days of the week it appeared as if the weather in Bengal would have been materially influenced by a large disturbance which appeared in the Punjab on the 6th instant, and which at first intensified and then extended in area on the 7th, 8th and 9th until it affected a large part of the North-West Provinces. This disturbance brought moderate to heavy rain to the Punjab and to parts of the North-West Provinces, and it appeared at one time as if it would drift eastwards, and enter Behar and Bengal. It, however, filled up and disappeared almost as rapidly as it had appeared, and with the exception of some light rain at some stations in Behar on the 10th instant, it did not materially affect the weather in Bengal This slight rainfall will have to be considered in the following week's report, and thus the present week has been quite rainless in Bengal.

Pressure—Was, as stated above, higher than the normal in all districts at the commencement of the week. It continued to oscillate by small amounts with an upward tendency till the 7th, and on this and the following day a rather sharp decrease took place, connected with the disturbance or depression in the Punjab noticed previously; on the 9th, however, pressure again increased slightly. The mean pressure for the week has been above the normal by amounts varying from 0·07″ at Purneah to nearly ·10″ at Berhampore and Dacca, the average excess for the whole province being more than 0·08″.

Temperature—Has again been below the normal, except at Hazaribagh, Cuttack, Bankipore and False Point. The defect is, as a rule, not great, varying from 3° at Chittagong to 0·4° at Calcutta and Durbhunga. The greatest deficiency is thus in the East Bengal Division, where it equals 2·4°, while in Behar and South-West Bengal the average defect is about 1°. In Orissa and Chutia Nagpur the average excess temperature has been about 1°. It is again very noticeable that the variations from the mean temperature have been due principally to abnormally low night temperatures. This is shown by the figures in the table given below, where the normal and actual mean maximum and minimum temperatures at eight selected stations are given, and thus while the day temperatures were in five out of eight cases slightly above the normal, the minimum or night temperatures were in five out of the eight cases decidedly below the normal.

For the week ending 9th January 1885.

The results of observations at the Alipore Observatory are not rigorously comparable with the registers of past years (at the Park-street Observatory). The barometer is about 8 feet higher at Alipore, and, other things being equal, reads therefore ·003 lower. The diurnal range of temperature is also greater at Alipore, and the mean temperature apparently about 2·3 lower; and finally, the thermometer, which has furnished the record of temperature at the Surveyor-General's Office during the last 20 years and upwards, is found to read 0·6 higher than the Kew standard thermometer, which is the standard of reference at the present Observatory.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 16h, and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No 86 formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

* A special census of the Europeans in the Darjiling Municipality was recently taken as the census of this section of the community taken in February 1881 was not reliable, owing to the Europeans being at a minimum in that month. The number of the natives remains as before, as it was not necessary to re-census them. The ratios have consequently been calculated on the revised population under all heads in the above table, except "Age," the ratios under which have been omitted, inasmuch as the census of the Europeans above alluded to cannot be employed as a basis of calculation owing to the results of the census under this head not having been recorded under the authorized form of age classification.

General Remarks on the fluctuation of principal staples carried over the East Indian Railway during the month ending 22nd November 1884.

INCREASES.

Coal.—The increase in the upwards coal is due to increased despatches from Raneegunge and Giridih to Foreign Railways and Paper Mills in Upper India, and that in the downwards coal to better demand on the Eastern Bengal Railway, and in Calcutta for steamer use and for brick-burning purposes.

Wheat.—There has been a slight increase in the earnings from this staple attended with a decrease in the weight carried, which is due to an improvement in the home markets.

Hides.—The increase in this traffic may be assigned to a brisk market in Calcutta, where supplies were eagerly taken up immediately they arrived from the mofussil.

Railway Materials, Foreign.—This increase is due to despatches from Howrah to Benares for the O. and R. Railway.

Cattle.—Attributable to an excess number of cattle having been consigned by the Commissariat Department.

DECREASES.

Cotton.—The decrease in this traffic was owing to very little business having been done at Calcutta and Bombay in consequence of the old crop having become exhausted and the new crop late.

Piece-goods.—Depression in the Calcutta market owing to failure of mofussil firms and comparatively high prices in the home markets are the causes for the decrease in this staple.

Indigo.—The falling off in this commodity is due to extremely languid biddings at the public sales in Calcutta, and the ruling prices ranging from Rs. 25 to Rs. 30 per maund below those of the last year. This state of the market is attributed to the late and heavy rains, which, it is said, had a bad effect in the manufacture of indigo.

Rice (husked and unhusked)—This decrease is accounted for by last season's crop having been much below the average.

Other Grain, Gram and Pulses.—Due to absence of local demand owing to favourable crops throughout the country.

Salt.—Principally to want of demand in the Patna and Gya districts.

Saltpetre.—Due to a decline of price in the Calcutta market and a consequent quiet demand.

Seeds.—The decrease in this staple is attributable to a reported total failure of the til seed crop, and to there being little demand for the other oil-seeds in the Calcutta market.

Sugar.—Scanty crop last season owing to deficient rainfall led to the decrease in this staple.

CUSTOMS.

H. A. COCKERELL, ESQ., C.S.I.

IN supersession of the rules issued under the provisions of section 9 of the Sea Customs Act VIII of 1878, and published at pages 283-85, part I, of the Calcutta Gazette of the 2nd April 1879, the following revised rules, which have been approved by the Lieutenant-Governor, are published for general information as required by section 204.

1. The designation of the various officers of Customs appointed by the Local Government under the provisions of sections 6 and 7 of the Act shall ordinarily be. —

Collector of Customs.
Assistant Collector of Customs and Head Appraiser;
Superintendent of the Preventive Service and Salt Golahs;
Preventive officers, or officers of the Preventive Service;
Appraisers.

2. The Collector of Customs shall be competent to exercise all or any of the powers conferred, and to perform all or any of the duties imposed, upon an officer of Customs by this Act. Where, as in Calcutta, the Collector is also the Chief Customs Officer, he shall also be competent to exercise all or any of the powers conferred, and to perform all or any of the duties imposed, on the Chief Customs officer by this Act.

3. The Assistant Collector of Customs shall be competent, in the temporary absence of the Collector of Customs, to exercise all or any of the powers conferred on that officer. Ordinarily the Assistant Collector, and all the other officers referred to in section 1, are subordinate to the Collector of Customs, and, except as hereinafter provided, shall be competent to exercise such of the powers conferred, and to perform such of the duties imposed upon officers of Customs by this Act, as the Collector may require of them, and to perform all or any of the duties, whether mentioned in this Act or not, as are ordinarily comprised in the management of a Custom House.

4. The Preventive Officers are specially employed for the purpose of preventing smuggling. Their duties consist in guarding vessels, and in preventing the shipment or landing of cargoes before a proper pass has been produced, or until the requirements of the Act have been carried out in respect of such cargo. Their ordinary duties are those enumerated in sections 17, 53, 54, 67, 68, 69, 70, 76, 83, 129, 141, 143, 169, 170, 171, 173, 178, 181 and 194.

5. The duties of Appraisers are principally connected with the examination and classification of goods, and are ordinarily those referred to in sections 27, 29, 31, 32, 33, 34, 37, 39, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48 and 194.

6. The power to adjudge confiscation and the power to impose a penalty shall be limited in the case of all Assistant Collectors of Customs to those indicated in clause (c) of section 182.

7. If any dispute arises between any officer of customs and any master of a vessel, or owner of goods, or other persons, relating to the importation, exportation, and warehousing of any goods, or to the proper rate of duty payable in respect thereof, or to the levy of any duty or penalty thereon, or to any seizure or forfeiture thereof, the Collector of Customs shall decide such dispute subject to an appeal to the Chief Customs authority, as provided in the Act.

8. For the purpose of determining claims to drawback under the provisions of sections 42 and 43, the date of importation of any goods shall be deemed to be the date on which the bill of entry thereof was delivered to the Customs Collector under section 86.

9. In order to obviate the loss and damage which is known to be caused to the owners of goods landed from ships under sections 83, 84, and 85, for which no claim is made within the period prescribed, and which are therefore liable to sale under section 88 of the Act, the Customs Collector may permit the master of the vessel, or his agents applying to act for him under section 5 of the Act, to take delivery of all such unclaimed goods upon paying all duties and charges which are due upon such unclaimed goods, and also entering into a bond whereby he, or his Agents so acting for him, shall undertake to meet all claims which may be preferred in respect of any goods so delivered to the master of any vessel or his agents as aforesaid.

10. When any goods are seized for an infringement of the customs law, or any breach of the provisions of the Customs Act is brought to notice by an officer of customs, and any confiscation or penalty is adjudged in consequence, it shall be competent to the Collector of Customs to award to such officer a part of the sale proceeds of such confiscation or penalty imposed, not exceeding three-fifths of the whole amount of such sale proceeds or penalty, after deduction therefrom of the Government dues, if any, and any incidental charges incurred in consequence of such confiscation.

11. Whenever an amendment of the valuation stated in a bill of entry is permitted under the last clause of section 32, and excess duty, together with the penalty, is levied in consequence, the whole or a part of such penalty shall, at the discretion of the Chief Officer of Customs, be payable to the officer who detected the under-valuation of the goods.

12. No refund of duty on account of the re-landing or short shipment of goods shall be granted unless application is made within three months from the date on which information of such short shipment or re-landing was given to the Customs Collector under the provisions of section 140.

13. Preventive Officers are required to bring to the immediate notice of the Conservator of the Port, or of one of his subordinates, any infringement of the rules for the prevention and suppression of fires on ships within the Port of Calcutta, especially of those regarding the use of lights and fires that they may observe while on duty on board ships in port.

14. The following rules are prescribed in connection with the parcel-post system between Ceylon and Calcutta and between the Straits Settlements and Calcutta :—

(a.) On the arrival of any parcels from a foreign port, the Postmaster will, in ordinary cases, accept the declarations of contents which accompany the parcels as correct, and will at once deliver the parcels to the addressees. These declarations, or copies thereof, will then be forwarded to the Collector of Customs. In cases of doubt or suspicion, or when the declarations show the articles to be liable to duty under the Indian Tariff Act, 1882, or subject to any restrictions regarding importation, the Postmaster shall give notice to the Collector of Customs, and shall not take any steps to deliver such parcels until the arrival of an officer deputed to attend by the Collector.

(b) Immediately on the receipt of notice from the Postmaster, the Collector shall send to the post office an Appraiser, or other competent officer, to determine the amount of customs duty payable on the parcels.

(c.) The Customs Officer is, as a general rule, to be guided by the declaration of the senders with regard to the contents of parcels ; but should he have reason to doubt the correctness of such declaration, he may order the detention of the parcels, and the Postmaster shall on his requisition detain them, pending receipt of the Collector's orders as regards their examination.

(d.) The Appraiser shall be provided with a book containing parcel-post passes in triplicate, as per form annexed. Of these passes the Appraiser shall fill up, sign and give to the Postmaster in exchange for the amount of duty one form, and shall fill up a second, which will be retained in the book as a counterfoil. The third form shall be filled up by the Appraiser, but signed by the Postmaster, and delivered to the Appraiser at the post office entry of the goods On this latter document the duty is to be passed to account, the Cashier giving a receipt for the money, and the Import Supervisor certifying that it has been duly entered in the registers. The short copy counterfoils are to be signed each day by the Accountant as an acknowledgment that the sums realized have been duly paid in from the Appraiser's Department.

(4) Every rule made under this section shall be published in the Gazette of India, and the publication in the Gazette of India of a rule purporting to be made under the last foregoing section shall be conclusive evidence that it has been duly made.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

IT is proposed by this Bill (1) to establish a system of voluntary registration of births and deaths for the benefit of such classes of the community as would be likely to avail themselves of such registration, (2) to establish general registry offices for keeping registers of the births and deaths so registered, and of marriages registered under Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872 (XV of 1872), and (3) to provide machinery for giving evidential value to certain existing registers of births, baptisms, deaths, burials and marriages, which have been kept under no law.

2. The subject of the registration of births and deaths among Europeans in India has been long under the consideration of the Government, whose attention has, moreover, been frequently directed to it by memorials from various Christian religious bodies urging very strongly the need for legislation.

3. The Indian Statute-book contains at present no general law for the registration of births and deaths. There are, indeed, enactments which provide for the registration of births and deaths within certain specified areas, principally municipalities and cantonments, but, in the first place, these enactments are strictly local in their nature, leaving the greater portion of the country unprovided for, and, in the next place, their provisions, being directed primarily to statistical purposes, are not of such a nature as to make the registers of births and deaths kept under them of value for purposes of evidence.

4. As to the numerous registers of baptisms and burials which are kept by ministers of religion in all parts of the country, it is doubtful how far they can be relied on for giving accurately the requisite particulars as to births and deaths, and most of them would, moreover, be inadmissible in evidence.

5. This being the state of the law, and considering the importance of the subject generally, and the memorials above referred to, and having regard to the fact that references are frequently made to the Secretary of State for India and to the Government of India for proof of age or of deaths in connection with questions involving large individual interests, such as rights to property, the Government of India is of opinion that it is expedient to enact a permissive law under which full facilities for registering births and deaths should be given to persons valuing unimpeachable evidence of these events.

6. As to the second object of the Bill, it is obvious that no system of registration of births and deaths can be complete or of practical value unless it provides for the establishment, at certain centres, of general offices where the information registered at the various local offices shall be collected and so arranged as to be readily available for public reference.

7. In this connection, the attention of the Government of India has been directed to the unsatisfactory nature of the system of registration of marriages under the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, and Act III of 1872.

Documentary evidence of all marriages under the former Act is, by the provisions of the Act or the orders thereunder, sent to the Secretary to the Local Government, who is also empowered to grant certified copies which are receivable in evidence. It would seem, therefore, at first sight, that nothing further was required But, as a matter of fact, not only are no arrangements made for maintaining an index to the marriages the records of which are retained in the local Secretariat, but the greater portion of the marriage records which are received in the local Secretariat have, under section 81 of the Act and the orders in force, to be sent on in original to the Government of India in the Home Department for transmission to the Secretary of State; so that the greater number of the marriage records which reach the local Secretariat do not remain there for purposes of reference, and such as do remain are, owing to the absence of an index, practically valueless.

As to Act III of 1872, this Act makes no provision for the marriages solemnized under it being reported to any central authority. The marriage-certificate books for which it provides are retained by the Registrar, who is not even required to index them. Their value as records of the marriages to which they refer is accordingly much diminished.

8. The Government of India have, therefore, availed themselves of the opportunity of the proposed legislation for the registration of births and deaths to remove these defects in the marriage-registration law, by providing for general registry offices for keeping registers, not only of the births and deaths which may be registered under the proposed law, but also of marriages which may be registered under Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872.

9. The present Bill extends (section 2) to the whole of British India, and, so far as regards subjects of Her Majesty, to the dominions of Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty.

10. As there seems to be no way of utilizing for the special purposes in view the compulsory system of registration of births and deaths which is prescribed by the local laws referred to in paragraph 3 above, or of separating the registration of the limited classes affected by the Bill from that of the general population which is required under those laws, it has been found necessary to save the laws providing for the registration of births and deaths within particular local areas at present in force or which may hereafter be passed; and this is done by section 4. The result of this section will, therefore, be that the persons to whom the provisions of the Bill relating to the registration of births and deaths are applicable will be bound, as heretofore, to satisfy the statistical requirements of such local Acts, and will be at liberty to re-register births and deaths under the Bill for evidential purposes.

11. Chapter II provides (section 5) for the establishment by the Local Governments of general registry offices of births, deaths and marriages, and the appointment of Registrars General of Births, Deaths and Marriages. By section 6 indexes are to be kept at the general registry offices of all the certified copies of registers which may be sent to them under the Bill or under Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872. These indexes (section 7) are to be open to public inspection, and copies of the entries in the certified copies of the registers to which they relate are to be given to all persons applying for them; and such copies are (section 8) to be admissible in evidence. By section 9 the Registrar General is given the superintendence of the Registrars of Births and Deaths.

12. Chapter III deals with the subject of registration of births and deaths. Section 10 defines the persons whose births and deaths are registrable as, in British India, the members of every race, sect or tribe to which the Indian Succession Act, 1865, applies and in respect of which an order under section 332 of that Act is not for the time being in force, and all persons professing the Christian religion, and in Native States all like persons who are British subjects. These provisions of the Bill will therefore, generally speaking, apply to East Indians, Jews, Armenians and Pársís as well as to Europeans and Native Christians. These are believed to be the only classes of persons in the country who are likely to avail themselves of the benefits of a law of this nature.

13. The chapter then provides for a registration establishment, empowering (sections 11 and 12) the Local Government in British India and the Governor General in Council in Native States to appoint either by name or by virtue of their office fit persons to be Registrars of Births and Deaths for definite local areas. It is proposed to appoint under the general powers given by these sections persons authorized or licensed to perform marriages under either Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, and, in order to provide for the receipt of notices from persons who may prefer not to resort to the Marriage Registrars, other suitable persons, one of whom it is intended should be appointed for each local area for which a person who is also a Marriage Registrar is appointed. It is to the latter class of Registrars that sections 13 and 14, which lay down certain provisions as to the office of such

Registrars, and for the filling up temporary vacancies in the office of such Registrars, are intended to apply. Section 15 provides for the supply of register books and the preservation of records.

14. The chapter next treats of the mode of registration. It imposes (section 16) a duty on every Registrar of Births and Deaths to make an entry in his register book of all births and deaths of which notice may be given to him within the prescribed time and in the prescribed mode by a person authorized to give him such notice. It then (sections 17 and 18) specifies the persons who shall be authorized to give notice of births and deaths respectively.

Section 19 provides that the entry of the birth or death is to be signed by the person giving notice, and declares that until it is so signed the birth or death shall not be deemed to be registered. By section 20 every Registrar of Births and Deaths is required to give on application made at the time of registering any birth or death by the person giving notice of the same, and on payment by him of the prescribed fee, a certificate of having registered the birth or death.

Section 21 provides for the sending by every Registrar of Births and Deaths at prescribed intervals to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages of certified copies of all entries in his register books. In the case of Registrars in British India, the copies are to be sent to the Registrar General within whose jurisdiction the local areas for which the Registrar is appointed is situate, an exception being made in the case of Registrars who are clergymen of the Churches of England, Rome and Scotland, who may send them to their ecclesiastical superiors to be forwarded by them to the Registrar General. In the case of Registrars in Native States, the copies are to be sent to such one of the Registrars General as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct in this behalf. Section 22 provides for searches, and grant of copies of entries in register books which shall be admissible in evidence.

15. Sections 23 and 24 prescribe penalties of imprisonment which may extend to three years and fine for wilfully giving false information to a Registrar of Births and Deaths, and of fine, which may extend to five hundred rupees, for Registrars of Births and Deaths omitting to enter births or deaths in the register or losing or injuring register books.

16. Lastly, section 25 prescribes the procedure by which errors in the form or substance of any entry in a register book of births and deaths may be corrected.

17. Chapter IV (sections 26 and 27) makes the amendments in Act III of 1872 and the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, which are necessary in order to make the provisions of these Acts fit in with the scheme of the Bill, under which certified copies of entries in the registers kept under these Acts are in future to be sent to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages.

18. Chapter V deals with the last of the three subjects referred to in the first paragraph of this Statement. As noted above, registers of births or baptisms and deaths or burials are at present kept in all parts of the country by ministers of religion. Registers of marriages were also similarly kept before the marriage-registration law came into force. Most of these registers are, as the law now stands, inadmissible in evidence, and possibly many of them should never be admitted in evidence owing to the irregular manner in which they have been compiled. At the same time, others are probably fit for admission as public registers. Under these circumstances, it seems advisable to follow the analogy of what was done in England (see 3 & 4 Vic., c. 92) and provide a procedure under which such of these registers as are worthy of recognition may be validated and certified copies of entries made in them declared admissible in evidence. This is accordingly done by Chapter V.

19. That chapter first (section 28) declares that any person having custody of any such records may, within one year from the date on which the Bill comes into force, send them to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages for the territories within which the person resides, or, if he resides in a Native State, to such one of those Registrars General as the Governor General in Council, by notification, directs. It then (section 29) provides for the appointment by the Governor General in Council of Commissioners to examine the registers so sent to the various Registrars General, and prescribes (section 30) the duties of the Commissioners, which are to inquire into the state, custody and authenticity of every register submitted to them, and to prepare lists of all such registers or portions of registers as they find to be accurate and faithful, and to certify upon some part of every book or volume containing any such register or portion of a register as is referred to in any such list that it is one of the registers referred to in the list. Section 31 permits, on payment of a fee, searches to be made of the lists so prepared, and provides for the grant of certified copies of the entries in the registers which shall be admissible in evidence.

20. Finally, Chapter VI (sections 32 and 33) empowers the Governor General in Council to make rules with regard to certain matters connected with the purposes of the Act, and prescribes the usual procedure for the making and publication of such rules.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 18h, and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 86 formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

CALCUTTA, the 19th January 1885.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 16TH OF JANUARY 1885.

THE close of the previous week had seen the rapid extinction of a large atmospheric disturbance which had existed over the Punjab and North-West Provinces. The disturbed conditions, however, extended on the Friday and Saturday, and on the latter day light rain was reported from a few stations in Behar, but the amounts in no case exceeded half an inch. The rain then passed away, but the air over a great part of Bengal was rather moist and some rapid changes of pressure, which were principally in a downward direction, accompanied, or perhaps gave rise to further atmospheric disturbance, which caused a few light local showers on the 13th and 14th, and which further gave rise to well defined dust-storms accompanied in some instances with rain on the 16th. On this day rather heavy rain fell at several stations in South Behar, while light rain was general over this district and also in the Moorshedabad Division of South-West Bengal. The heaviest rainfalls on this day were 0·98 inch at Aurangabad and 0·83 inch at Gya.

Pressure has during the week diminished very considerably, and while during last week it was in excess over the whole Province by an average of 0·05″, the mean pressure for this week has been below the normal at all stations in Orissa, and at several stations in South-West Bengal and Behar. The variations from the mean pressure this week are not very large, and the extremes are a defect of 0·034″ at Calcutta and an excess of 0·031″ at Hazaribagh.

Temperature has increased very considerably during the week, and is now very considerably above the normal in all districts, though at one or two isolated stations there has been a slight defect This increase seems to have taken place principally in the night or minimum temperatures; thus the following table gives the normal and actual average maximum and minimum temperatures at eight selected stations, and it will be noticed that while the night temperatures have averaged 4·4° in excess, the day temperatures only show 1·9° in excess of the normal.

[For the week ending 16*th January* 1885.

The occurrence and distribution of the rainfall has been to a certain extent dealt with previously, and it will have been noticed that rain was received in South Behar, Chutia Nagpur, North Behar and South-West Bengal. South Behar received the largest amount, equal over the whole division, however, to only 0·25 inch, Chutia Nagpur received on the average a little over a tenth of an inch, while in the two other districts the amounts were only nominal, being only equal to a few hundredths of an inch.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven meteorological divisions of the Province for the week ending Friday, the 16th January 1885 :—

MEMORANDA.

DURING the week ending 3rd January 1885, births and deaths were recorded in the first class Municipalities in Bengal, at the rates (vide table appended to this memoranda), respectively, of 23·2 and 33·7 per 1,000 of population, against 24·9 and 32·1 per 1,000 during the preceding week ending 27th December 1884, showing a decrease in the registration of births against an increase in that of deaths.

2. The Municipalities which exhibit the highest results in birth and death registration are—

Births.	Ratio per mille.	Deaths.	Ratio per mille.
Monghyr	47·9	Utterpara	94·4
Chittagong	39·9	Kishnaghur	66·2
Gya	35·6	Hughli	52·1

		Santipore	35·0
		Purneah	31·6
		Bhagulpore	33·5
		Patna	33·1
		Howrah	32·5

3. The mortality from the several death-causes exhibited in the table above referred to was as follows, in comparison with that in the preceding week :—

	Ratio per mille during the weeks ending—
	3rd January 1885.	27th December 1884.
Cholera	2·4	2·9
Small-pox	·1	·2
Fever	14·5	14·7
Bowel-complaints	6·7	6·0
Injury	·3	·2
Other causes	9·7	8·1

The above figures indicate that, while the mortality from the diseases classed under the head of "Other causes" had increased to a noticeable extent, the death-rates from the rest of the diseases exhibit only fractional differences.

4. Excluding small-pox and injury, which were nowhere noticeably fatal, the rest of the diseases caused excessive loss of life in the undermentioned Municipalities :—

BOARD OF REVENUE, L.P., CALCUTTA, the 27th January 1885.

No. 22B.

CUSTOMS.

H. A. COCKERELL, ESQ., C.S.I.

IN supersession of the rules issued under the provisions of section 9 of the Sea Customs Act VIII of 1878, and published at pages 283-85, part I, of the Calcutta Gazette of the 2nd April 1879, the following revised rules, which have been approved by the Lieutenant-Governor, are published for general information as required by section 204.

1. The designation of the various officers of Customs appointed by the Local Government under the provisions of sections 6 and 7 of the Act shall ordinarily be.—

Collector of Customs.
Assistant Collector of Customs and Head Appraiser;
Superintendent of the Preventive Service and Salt Golahs;
Preventive officers, or officers of the Preventive Service;
Appraisers.

2. The Collector of Customs shall be competent to exercise all or any of the powers conferred, and to perform all or any of the duties imposed, upon an officer of Customs by this Act. Where, as in Calcutta, the Collector is also the Chief Customs Officer, he shall also be competent to exercise all or any of the powers conferred, and to perform all or any of the duties imposed, on the Chief Customs officer by this Act.

3. The Assistant Collector of Customs shall be competent, in the temporary absence of the Collector of Customs, to exercise all or any of the powers conferred on that officer. Ordinarily the Assistant Collector, and all the other officers referred to in section 1, are subordinate to the Collector of Customs, and, except as hereinafter provided, shall be competent to exercise such of the powers conferred, and to perform such of the duties imposed upon officers of Customs by this Act, as the Collector may require of them, and to perform all or any of the duties, whether mentioned in this Act or not, as are ordinarily comprised in the management of a Custom House.

4. The Preventive Officers are specially employed for the purpose of preventing smuggling. Their duties consist in guarding vessels, and in preventing the shipment or landing of cargoes before a proper pass has been produced, or until the requirements of the Act have been carried out in respect of such cargo. Their ordinary duties are those enumerated in sections 17, 53, 54, 67, 68, 69, 70, 76, 83, 129, 141, 143, 169, 170, 171, 173, 178, 181 and 194.

5. The duties of Appraisers are principally connected with the examination and classification of goods, and are ordinarily those referred to in sections 27, 29, 31, 32, 33, 34, 37, 39, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48 and 194.

6. The power to adjudge confiscation and the power to impose a penalty shall be limited in the case of all Assistant Collectors of Customs to those indicated in clause (c) of section 182.

7. If any dispute arises between any officer of customs and any master of a vessel, or owner of goods, or other persons, relating to the importation, exportation, and warehousing of any goods, or to the proper rate of duty payable in respect thereof, or to the levy of any duty or penalty thereon, or to any seizure or forfeiture thereof, the Collector of Customs shall decide such dispute subject to an appeal to the Chief Customs authority, as provided in the Act.

8. For the purpose of determining claims to drawback under the provisions of sections 42 and 43, the date of importation of any goods shall be deemed to be the date on which the bill of entry thereof was delivered to the Customs Collector under section 86.

9. In order to obviate the loss and damage which is known to be caused to the owners of goods landed from ships under sections 83, 84, and 85, for which no claim is made within the period prescribed, and which are therefore liable to sale under section 88 of the Act, the Customs Collector may permit the master of the vessel, or his agents applying to act for him under section 5 of the Act, to take delivery of all such unclaimed goods upon paying all duties and charges which are due upon such unclaimed goods, and also entering into a bond whereby he, or his Agents so acting for him, shall undertake to meet all claims which may be preferred in respect of any goods so delivered to the master of any vessel or his agents as aforesaid.

10. When any goods are seized for an infringement of the customs law, or any breach of the provisions of the Customs Act is brought to notice by an officer of customs, and any confiscation or penalty is adjudged in consequence, it shall be competent to the Collector of Customs to award to such officer a part of the sale proceeds of such confiscation or penalty imposed, not exceeding three-fifths of the whole amount of such sale proceeds or penalty, after deduction therefrom of the Government dues, if any, and any incidental charges incurred in consequence of such confiscation.

11. Whenever an amendment of the valuation stated in a bill of entry is permitted under the last clause of section 32, and excess duty, together with the penalty, is levied in consequence, the whole or a part of such penalty shall, at the discretion of the Chief Officer of Customs, be payable to the officer who detected the under-valuation of the goods.

12. No refund of duty on account of the re-landing or short shipment of goods shall be granted unless application is made within three months from the date on which information of uch short shipment or re-landing was given to the Customs Collector under the provisions of section 140.

13. Preventive Officers are reqnired to bring to the immediate notice of the Conservator of the Port, or of one of his subordinates, any infringement of the rules for the prevention and suppression of fires on ships within the Port of Calcutta, especially of those regarding the use of lights and fires that they may observe while on duty on board ships in port.

14. The following rules are prescribed in connection with the parcel-post system between Ceylon and Calcutta and between the Straits Settlements and Calcutta :—

(a.) On the arrival of any parcels from a foreign port, the Postmaster will, in ordinary cases, accept the declarations of contents which accompany the parcels as correct, and will at once deliver the parcels to the addressees. These declarations, or copies thereof, will then be forwarded to the Collector of Customs. In cases of doubt or suspicion, or when the declarations show the articles to be liable to duty under the Indian Tariff Act, 1882, or subject to any restrictions regarding importation, the Postmaster shall give notice to the Collector of Customs, and shall not take any steps to deliver such parcels until the arrival of an officer deputed to attend by the Collector.

(b.) Immediately on the receipt of notice from the Postmaster, the Collector shall send to the post office an Appraiser, or other competent officer, to determine the amount of customs duty payable on the parcels.

(c.) The Customs Officer is, as a general rule, to be guided by the declaration of the senders with regard to the contents of parcels ; but should he have reason to doubt the correctness of such declaration, he may order the detention of the parcels, and the Postmaster shall on his requisition detain them, pending receipt of the Collector's orders as regards their examination.

(d.) The Appraiser shall be provided with a book containing parcel-post passes in triplicate, as per form annexed. Of these passes the Appraiser shall fill up, sign and give to the Postmaster in exchange for the amount of duty one form, and shall fill up a second, which will be retained in the book as a counterfoil. The third form shall be filled up by the Appraiser, but signed by the Postmaster, and delivered to the Appraiser at the post office entry of the goods. On this latter document the duty is to be passed to account, the Cashier giving a receipt for the money, and the Import Supervisor certifying that it has been duly entered in the registers. The short copy counterfoils are to be signed each day by the Accountant as an acknowledgment that the sums realized have been duly paid in from the Appraiser's Department.

PART IV.

Bill of the Bengal Council.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was read in the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations, on the 24th January 1885, and was referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report thereon after a month :—

A Bill to amend Bengal Act III of 1879 (an Act to provide for the periodical inspection of Steam Boilers and Prime Movers attached thereto in the Town and Suburbs of Calcutta, and in Howrah).

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Act for the periodical inspection of Steam Boilers and Prime Movers attached thereto in the Town and Suburbs of Calcutta, and in Howrah: It is enacted as follows :—

Construction and commencement of Act.

1. This Act shall be read with, and taken as part of, Bengal Act III of 1879, and it shall come into force from the date on which it may be published in the Calcutta Gazette with the assent of the Governor-General.

Definitions.

2. In section three, to the definition of "Boiler" the words "and any steam pipe leading therefrom" shall be added.

In the same section the following definition shall be inserted after the definition of "Boiler" :—

"'Inspector' means a person appointed under this Act to be an Inspector."

Amendment of section 4.

3. In section four the following clause shall be inserted after clause (6) :—

"(7) For regulating the examination of, and the grant (with or without examination) of certificates to, persons to act as Engineers under this Act, and the cancellation of certificates so granted."

In the same section, line sixteen, the figure "(8)" shall be substituted for the figure "(7)."

Amendment of section 7.

4. In section seven, line nine, between the word "the" and the word "schedule" the word "first" shall be inserted.

5. After section seven the following section shall be inserted :—

Licensing of prime movers on report of a certified Engineer.

"7A. If the owner of any prime mover presents to the Inspector, at the time of giving notice in respect of that prime mover under section five, a report in respect of that prime mover in the form prescribed in the second schedule hereto annexed, or a form to the like effect, and signed by an Engineer who at the time of making such report is in charge of such prime mover, and who has obtained, in accordance with the rules made under section four, clause seven, a certificate as Engineer, and pays to the Inspector such fee as the Local Government may direct, the Inspector shall, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, endorse on the report a license in the form prescribed in the third schedule hereto annexed, or a form to the like effect, without examining the prime mover."

6. The schedule containing the "Form of Certificate" shall be the first schedule of this Act, and the following schedules shall be added after the said schedule:—

SECOND SCHEDULE.

(See section 7A.)

REPORT OF ENGINEER.

1	2	3	4	5	6	7
Name of owner.	Description of prime mover.	Power.	When and where made.	When and where last repaired.	No. and date of certificate of Engineer in charge.	REMARKS

I the undersigned, an Engineer certified under section four, clause seven, of Bengal Act III of 1879, certify that I have examined the prime mover above described, and to the best of my judgment it is in good condition, and is not so exposed as to be likely to be dangerous, and may safely be licensed for the period of

C. D.,
Engineer in Charge.

THIRD SCHEDULE.

(See section 7A.)

FORM OF LICENSE TO BE ENDORSED ON REPORT OF ENGINEER.

I, the undersigned, hereby authorize the use of the prime mover to which this report refers for a period of ending on the day of 18 .

A. B.,
Inspector.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE wording of Bengal Act III of 1879 requires the Inspector appointed under the Act to make a careful and detailed examination of all boilers and prime-movers to which the Act applies, before he grants or renews a certificate authorizing their use. It appears, however, that in practice the provisions of the law have not been enforced in respect of prime-movers. It has been represented to Government that such a periodical examination of prime-movers as the Act contemplates would be a serious hindrance to business; that engines are usually in charge of competent persons, who are well acquainted with their details and their working; and that while a careful inspection of boilers is necessary to secure the safety of work-people and the public, the risk in respect of prime-movers is inconsiderable, and moreover is not of a kind which periodical examination by an Inspector would be likely to obviate. On these grounds it was suggested that all reference to prime-movers should be expunged from the Act.

A reference, however, to the legislation in force in other provinces of India shows that the periodical inspection of prime-movers is required in Bombay under Bombay Act V of 1873, and in British Burma under Act XVIII of 1882. It does not appear advisable that the Government should abandon all power to ascertain whether a prime-mover is in proper working order, and it will perhaps be found possible to retain this power under conditions which will relieve the owners of prime-movers from the inconvenience which might result from a strict application of the existing law.

With this object the present Bill has been prepared. It does not repeal any portion of Bengal Act III of 1879, but it adds a section borrowed from the procedure laid down in Act XVIII of 1882. This new section provides that, when a prime-mover is in charge of a certified engineer, the engineer's report on the condition of the prime-mover shall be accepted by the Inspector as sufficient, and the license shall be issued or renewed accordingly. The Government is also empowered by the Bill to make rules for the grant of certificates (with or without examination) to persons qualified to act as engineers, and it modifies (in accordance with the recommendation of the Boiler Commissioners) the definition of a "boiler" so as to make the word include the steam-pipes connected with the boiler.

(4) Every rule made under this section shall be published in the Gazette of India, and the publication in the Gazette of India of a rule purporting to be made under the last foregoing section shall be conclusive evidence that it has been duly made.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

IT is proposed by this Bill (1) to establish a system of voluntary registration of births and deaths for the benefit of such classes of the community as would be likely to avail themselves of such registration, (2) to establish general registry offices for keeping registers of the births and deaths so registered, and of marriages registered under Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872 (XV of 1872), and (3) to provide machinery for giving evidential value to certain existing registers of births, baptisms, deaths, burials and marriages, which have been kept under no law.

2. The subject of the registration of births and deaths among Europeans in India has been long under the consideration of the Government, whose attention has, moreover, been frequently directed to it by memorials from various Christian religious bodies urging very strongly the need for legislation.

3. The Indian Statute-book contains at present no general law for the registration of births and deaths. There are, indeed, enactments which provide for the registration of births and deaths within certain specified areas, principally municipalities and cantonments, but, in the first place, these enactments are strictly local in their nature, leaving the greater portion of the country unprovided for, and, in the next place, their provisions, being directed primarily to statistical purposes, are not of such a nature as to make the registers of births and deaths kept under them of value for purposes of evidence.

4. As to the numerous registers of baptisms and burials which are kept by ministers of religion in all parts of the country, it is doubtful how far they can be relied on for giving accurately the requisite particulars as to births and deaths, and most of them would, moreover, be inadmissible in evidence.

5. This being the state of the law, and considering the importance of the subject generally, and the memorials above referred to, and having regard to the fact that references are frequently made to the Secretary of State for India and to the Government of India for proof of age or of deaths in connection with questions involving large individual interests, such as rights to property, the Government of India is of opinion that it is expedient to enact a permissive law under which full facilities for registering births and deaths should be given to persons valuing unimpeachable evidence of these events.

6. As to the second object of the Bill, it is obvious that no system of registration of births and deaths can be complete or of practical value unless it provides for the establishment, at certain centres, of general offices where the information registered at the various local offices shall be collected and so arranged as to be readily available for public reference.

7. In this connection, the attention of the Government of India has been directed to the unsatisfactory nature of the system of registration of marriages under the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, and Act III of 1872.

Documentary evidence of all marriages under the former Act is, by the provisions of the Act or the orders thereunder, sent to the Secretary to the Local Government, who is also empowered to grant certified copies which are receivable in evidence. It would seem, therefore, at first sight, that nothing further was required. But, as a matter of fact, not only are no arrangements made for maintaining an index to the marriages the records of which are retained in the local Secretariat, but the greater portion of the marriage records which are received in the local Secretariat have, under section 81 of the Act and the orders in force, to be sent on in original to the Government of India in the Home Department for transmission to the Secretary of State; so that the greater number of the marriage records which reach the local Secretariat do not remain there for purposes of reference, and such as do remain are, owing to the absence of an index, practically valueless.

As to Act III of 1872, this Act makes no provision for the marriages solemnized under it being reported to any central authority. The marriage-certificate books for which it provides are retained by the Registrar, who is not even required to index them. Their value as records of the marriages to which they refer is accordingly much diminished.

8. The Government of India have, therefore, availed themselves of the opportunity of the proposed legislation for the registration of births and deaths to remove these defects in the marriage-registration law, by providing for general registry offices for keeping registers, not only of the births and deaths which may be registered under the proposed law, but also of marriages which may be registered under Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872.

9. The present Bill extends (section 2) to the whole of British India, and, so far as regards subjects of Her Majesty, to the dominions of Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty.

10. As there seems to be no way of utilizing for the special purposes in view the compulsory system of registration of births and deaths which is prescribed by the local laws referred to in paragraph 3 above, or of separating the registration of the limited classes affected by the Bill from that of the general population which is required under those laws, it has been found necessary to save the laws providing for the registration of births and deaths within particular local areas at present in force or which may hereafter be passed; and this is done by section 4. The result of this section will, therefore, be that the persons to whom the provisions of the Bill relating to the registration of births and deaths are applicable will be bound, as heretofore, to satisfy the statistical requirements of such local Acts, and will be at liberty to re-register births and deaths under the Bill for evidential purposes.

11. Chapter II provides (section 5) for the establishment by the Local Governments of general registry offices of births, deaths and marriages, and the appointment of Registrars General of Births, Deaths and Marriages. By section 6 indexes are to be kept at the general registry offices of all the certified copies of registers which may be sent to them under the Bill or under Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872. These indexes (section 7) are to be open to public inspection, and copies of the entries in the certified copies of the registers to which they relate are to be given to all persons applying for them; and such copies are (section 8) to be admissible in evidence. By section 9 the Registrar General is given the superintendence of the Registrars of Births and Deaths.

12. Chapter III deals with the subject of registration of births and deaths. Section 10 defines the persons whose births and deaths are registrable as, in British India, the members of every race, sect or tribe to which the Indian Succession Act, 1865, applies and in respect of which an order under section 332 of that Act is not for the time being in force, and all persons professing the Christian religion, and in Native States all like persons who are British subjects. These provisions of the Bill will therefore, generally speaking, apply to East Indians, Jews, Armenians and Pársís as well as to Europeans and Native Christians. These are believed to be the only classes of persons in the country who are likely to avail themselves of the benefits of a law of this nature.

13. The chapter then provides for a registration establishment, empowering (sections 11 and 12) the Local Government in British India and the Governor General in Council in Native States to appoint either by name or by virtue of their office fit persons to be Registrars of Births and Deaths for definite local areas. It is proposed to appoint under the general powers given by these sections persons authorized or licensed to perform marriages under either Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, and, in order to provide for the receipt of notices from persons who may prefer not to resort to the Marriage Registrars, other suitable persons, one of whom it is intended should be appointed for each local area for which a person who is also a Marriage Registrar is appointed. It is to the latter class of Registrars that sections 13 and 14, which lay down certain provisions as to the office of such

Registrars, and for the filling up temporary vacancies in the office of such Registrars, are intended to apply. Section 15 provides for the supply of register books and the preservation of records.

14. The chapter next treats of the mode of registration. It imposes (section 16) a duty on every Registrar of Births and Deaths to make an entry in his register book of all births and deaths of which notice may be given to him within the prescribed time and in the prescribed mode by a person authorized to give him such notice. It then (sections 17 and 18) specifies the persons who shall be authorized to give notice of births and deaths respectively.

Section 19 provides that the entry of the birth or death is to be signed by the person giving notice, and declares that until it is so signed the birth or death shall not be deemed to be registered. By section 20 every Registrar of Births and Deaths is required to give on application made at the time of registering any birth or death by the person giving notice of the same, and on payment by him of the prescribed fee, a certificate of having registered the birth or death.

Section 21 provides for the sending by every Registrar of Births and Deaths at prescribed intervals to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages of certified copies of all entries in his register books. In the case of Registrars in British India, the copies are to be sent to the Registrar General within whose jurisdiction the local areas for which the Registrar is appointed is situate, an exception being made in the case of Registrars who are clergymen of the Churches of England, Rome and Scotland, who may send them to their ecclesiastical superiors to be forwarded by them to the Registrar General. In the case of Registrars in Native States, the copies are to be sent to such one of the Registrars General as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct in this behalf. Section 22 provides for searches, and grant of copies of entries in register books which shall be admissible in evidence.

15. Sections 23 and 24 prescribe penalties of imprisonment which may extend to three years and fine for wilfully giving false information to a Registrar of Births and Deaths, and of fine, which may extend to five hundred rupees, for Registrars of Births and Deaths omitting to enter births or deaths in the register or losing or injuring register books.

16. Lastly, section 25 prescribes the procedure by which errors in the form or substance of any entry in a register book of births and deaths may be corrected.

17. Chapter IV (sections 26 and 27) makes the amendments in Act III of 1872 and the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, which are necessary in order to make the provisions of these Acts fit in with the scheme of the Bill, under which certified copies of entries in the registers kept under these Acts are in future to be sent to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages.

18. Chapter V deals with the last of the three subjects referred to in the first paragraph of this Statement. As noted above, registers of births or baptisms and deaths or burials are at present kept in all parts of the country by ministers of religion. Registers of marriages were also similarly kept before the marriage-registration law came into force. Most of these registers are, as the law now stands, inadmissible in evidence, and possibly many of them should never be admitted in evidence owing to the irregular manner in which they have been compiled. At the same time, others are probably fit for admission as public registers. Under these circumstances, it seems advisable to follow the analogy of what was done in England (see 3 & 4 Vic., c. 92) and provide a procedure under which such of these registers as are worthy of recognition may be validated and certified copies of entries made in them declared admissible in evidence. This is accordingly done by Chapter V.

19. That chapter first (section 28) declares that any person having custody of any such records may, within one year from the date on which the Bill comes into force, send them to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages for the territories within which the person resides, or, if he resides in a Native State, to such one of those Registrars General as the Governor General in Council, by notification, directs. It then (section 29) provides for the appointment by the Governor General in Council of Commissioners to examine the registers so sent to the various Registrars General, and prescribes (section 30) the duties of the Commissioners, which are to inquire into the state, custody and authenticity of every register submitted to them, and to prepare lists of all such registers or portions of registers as they find to be accurate and faithful, and to certify upon some part of every book or volume containing any such register or portion of a register as is referred to in any such list that it is one of the registers referred to in the list. Section 31 permits, on payment of a fee, searches to be made of the lists so prepared, and provides for the grant of certified copies of the entries in the registers which shall be admissible in evidence.

20. Finally, Chapter VI (sections 32 and 33) empowers the Governor General in Council to make rules with regard to certain matters connected with the purposes of the Act, and prescribes the usual procedure for the making and publication of such rules.

STEAM BOILERS AND PRIME MOVERS.

THE HON. MR. REYNOLDS in introducing the Bill to amend Bengal Act III of 1879, said:—The object of this Bill is to amend the Act which provides in Bengal for the periodical examination of boilers and prime movers in Calcutta, the Suburbs, and Howrah by Inspectors appointed by the Government. As far as boilers are concerned, the Act, so far as I know, has worked smoothly and successfully. But it has been represented to the Government that in regard to prime movers the Act has practically been a dead letter, and that its provisions in reference to prime movers have never been enforced. It was represented that, while it was a comparatively easy matter to inspect and examine the condition of a boiler, the examination of prime movers, such as is contemplated in the Act, will involve the stoppage of the machinery, and in a certain degree the dismantling of the engine, and that this would cause serious inconvenience and hindrance to business, while at the same time the risk to the public from the condition of a prime mover is not of such a kind as to justify the inconvenience and the interruption of business which a strict application of the law would necessitate. This question was brought before the Government some months ago by the Commissioners who are charged with the administration of the law, and the Government referred it for the opinion of a number of firms and companies who employ machinery of the kind referred to in the Act, and also for the opinion of the Chamber of Commerce, and in reply a very general opinion was expressed by those who were consulted that all reference to prime movers should be expunged from the Act, and that the law should provide for the inspection of boilers only. This, however, did not seem an entirely satisfactory solution of the question, as it would be a distinctly retrograde step in legislation. It did not appear desirable that the Government should entirely surrender the power of examining the condition of prime movers, and the proposed change would also place the law in Bengal on a very different footing from the law which prevails in other provinces of India. The law in Bombay and in British Burmah is in some respects far more stringent than the law which prevails in Bengal. Not only does it require that a license should be issued for permitting the working of boilers and prime movers, but it declares that no license shall be granted for the working of a boiler or prime mover, unless the engineer in charge is an engineer who has received a certificate of competency from the Government. That very stringent Regulation has no corresponding clause in the Bengal Act. The law in Bombay is contained in Act V of 1873 of the Bombay Council. That Act does not apply to prime movers of less than ten nominal horse-power; but with regard to other prime movers, it provides for the examination of persons who intend to become engineers in charge of boilers and prime movers, and for the grant of certificates of competency to such persons; and it further provides that no person shall be in charge of a boiler or prime mover unless he possesses a certificate of competency, and that no license shall be granted for the working of a boiler or prime mover unless there is a certificated engineer in charge. The law in force in British Burmah is Act XVIII of 1882, and it provides in the same way for the grant of certificates of competency to engineers, and it divides engineers into first and second class engineers, and it declares in the same way as the Bombay Act that no boiler or prime mover shall be licensed unless it is in charge of a certificated engineer. But it contains a further provision which does not appear in the Bombay Act, and this declares that on the certificate of an engineer of the first class, with regard to the condition of a boiler or prime mover of which he is in charge, a license for the working of the engine shall be granted without an examination by the Inspector being required. That Act, I may mention, has been supplemented during the present year by a short Act, which allows a certificate to be granted to an engine-driver for engines of not more that ten horse-power. The provisions of the Burmah Act seem to offer a way out of the difficulty which has been felt in Bengal without going to the extreme step of striking out of the Act all reference to prime movers. The Bill therefore provides, and this is in accordance with the recommendation of the Boiler Commissioners, for the grant of certificates to engineers, and it also proposes the introduction of a new section after section 7, allowing the licensing of a prime mover on the report of a certificated engineer. The Bill does not propose to extend this new section to boilers. The object of legislation of this kind is to interfere as little as may be possible compatible with the maintenance of such precautions as are necessary for the security of the workpeople employed and of the general public, and that object would perhaps be imperfectly attained if we were to give any certificated engineer power practically to grant a license, or were to allow a license to be granted on his report, and were to dispense in such cases with any official inspection of the boiler. It has been represented to Government that, even if a prime mover should be in an unsatisfactory condition, this involves comparatively little risk, whereas a boiler explosion is a very serious matter indeed. If we are to give the same power as is given under the Burmah Act for either boilers or prime movers to be licensed on the report of the engineer in charge, we should have to be very cautious in granting certificates of competency to engineers: and moreover we should be taking a step for which no practical necessity has been shown, as there are no complaints of the working of the present law in connection with boilers

The Bill, therefore, as at present drafted, proposes that any engineer who has obtained a certificate of competency as engineer shall be permitted to make a report in respect of a prime mover; but it does not extend this provision to boilers, which will remain under the same inspection as at present. I now move that the Bill be read in Council.

The motion was put and agreed to, and the Bill was referred to a Select Committee consisting of Colonel the Hon. S. T. Trevor, the Hon. Mr. Miller, the Hon. Mr. Irving, and the Mover.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday the 31st instant.

CALCUTTA, the 26th January 1885.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 23RD OF JANUARY 1885.

During the first few days of the present week, winds at the head of the Bay, in many instances, became decidedly southerly and south-westerly, and brought up very considerable amounts of moisture into South-West Bengal, Orissa, and Chutia Nagpur. The changes of pressure were also considerable, and though the barometer rose slightly on the Saturday and Sunday, it fell again considerably on the following two days; the changes of pressure were, however, rather irregular, and on Tuesday a very distinct area of low pressure was developed in Orissa. This slightly disturbed condition of the atmosphere gave rise to a considerable number of local storms with rain, and thus up till Wednesday local showers were reported from Orissa, South-West Bengal, and Chutia Nagpur. From the 21st, however, pressure commenced to rise, and on the following day (Thursday, the 22nd) an extremely rapid increase of pressure took place, amounting in some instances to as much as 0·16″. On this day pressure at all the stations was extremely high, and fully 0·2″ in excess of the normal at some of the stations in Orissa and East and South-West Bengal. A pressure of no less than 30·3″ was reported from Balasore, Midnapore, Calcutta, and Burdwan on this day, and this of course is exceptionally high.

The mean pressure for the week has thus been considerably in excess of the normal. The average excess over the whole Province has been 0·08″, while the extreme variations have been from 0·044″ in excess at Purneah to 0·103″ in excess at Dacca and Chittagong. On the whole, East Bengal shows rather a larger excess pressure than the other districts.

Temperature was during the previous week considerably above the normal in all districts, and for the first few days of the present week the changes which occurred were mainly in the direction of increased temperature. On the 22nd instant, however, with the very rapid increase of pressure noted before, a very rapid decrease of temperature took place, which in some instances amounted to as much as 5° in the mean daily temperature; the temperature continued to fall on the following day, but nevertheless the mean temperature for the week has been in excess in Orissa, South-West Bengal, and East Bengal, while it has been slightly in defect in Behar and Chutia Nagpur. The variations are fairly evenly distributed over both day and night temperatures, as will be seen from the following table which gives the normal and actual mean maximum and minimum temperatures at eight selected stations for the week :—

Names of Stations.	Maximum day temperature.			Minimum night temperature.
	Normal average for week.	Actual average for week.	Difference.	Normal average for week.	Actual average for week.	Difference.

Hazaribagh	73·4	72·4	—1·0	50·8	51·1	+0·3

The rainfall for the week has been confined to the local storms above mentioned, and there was no general rainfall at all during the week. Rain has thus only fallen at eleven out of forty-nine stations in South-West Bengal, at two out of sixteen stations in Orissa, and at four out of ten registering stations in Chutia Nagpur. In no cases have the amounts recorded been large, the average rainfall of the whole district of Chutia Nagpur being 0·11 inch, that of South-West Bengal 0·04 inch and of Orissa 0·03 inch. With the exception of a slight shower of a tenth of an inch at Buxa (Darjeeling Hill), all the other districts have been absolutel rainless during the past week. It need scarcely therefore be said that in all districts, except Chutia Nagpur, the rainfall has been below the average for the week, though in this district it has been 0·03 inch in excess.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven meteorological divisions of the Province for the week ending Friday, the 23rd January 1885 :—

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 18h, and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No 86 formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

MEMORANDA.

THE returns received from the first class Municipalities in Bengal, during the week ending 10th January 1885, furnish the following particulars :—

1. That during the week in question births and deaths were recorded in the proportions, respectively, of 24·0 and 31·6 per 1,000 of population, as opposed to 23·2 and 33·7 per 1,000, respectively, during the preceding week ending 3rd January, indicating improvement in the registration of births against retrogression in that of deaths.

2. That the undermentioned Municipalities returned the highest proportions of births and deaths :—

indicating, in comparison with the outcome of the preceding week ending 3rd January, a sensible decrease in the death-rate from fever, equal mortality from the diseases classed under the head of "Other causes," and no material difference in the fatal results from the other diseases.

4. That while small-pox and injury were nowhere conspicuously active, the other diseases caused the highest mortality in the undermentioned Municipalities :—

* A special census of the Europeans in the Darjiling Municipality was recently taken as the census of this section of the community taken in February 1881 was not reliable, owing to the Europeans being at a minimum in that month. The number of the natives remains as before, as it was not necessary to re-census them. The ratios have consequently been calculated on the revised population under all heads in the above table, except "Age," the ratios under which have been omitted, inasmuch as the census of the Europeans above alluded to cannot be employed as a basis of calculation owing to the results of the census under this head not having been recorded under the authorised form of age classification.
